HINDENBURG FAR AHEAD BUT FAILS AT ELECTION; RUNOFF IS SET APRIL 10

Total of President Falls Short Only 168,453 Votes.

HITLER WEAK IN BALLOTING

Present Leader Almost Sure of Winning Next Month.

Berlin, Monday, March 14 (A.P.).—President Paul Von Hindenburg, who appealed to the voters to keep him at the head of the nation in order that civil war might be averted, lost by only 168,453 votes in yesterday's election, but he was so far ahead of every other candidate it is taken for granted he will succeed when the nation votes again April 10.

A total of 18,661,736 citizens cast their ballots for the present head of the state, instead of the 18,830,180 required to give him a majority. Thus he lost out by less than one-half of one per cent of the votes cast.

The most surprising feature of the election was the relative weakness of Adolf Hitler, leader of the National Socialist Fascists, who polled only 11,328,571 votes. Herr Hitler himself had counted on many more than 12,000,000 ballots, and his lieutenants were confident his strength would run from 15,000,000 to 18,000,000.

Preliminary Summary.

The election commissioner issued the following preliminary summary of the complete results:

President von Hindenburg, 18,661,736.

Adolf Hitler (Nazi), 11,338,571.

Ernest Thaelmann (Communist), 4,982,079.

Theodore Duesterberg (Nationalist), 2,557,876.

Gustav Winter (Independent), 111,470.

Scattering, 8,645.

Total vote, 37,660,377.

In addition to Herr Hitler, Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, leader of the Nationalist party, was a disappointed man this morning. He had engineered Lieut. Col. Duesterberg's candidacy solely for the purpose of having votes to bargain with in the event of a second ballot.

Dr. Hugenberg Falls at Plan.

The lieutenant colonel's 2,517,876 votes, however, neither are needed by Von Hindenburg to carry him through the second ballot, in which a plurality suffices, nor can they help put over Hitler, for the combined National Socialist-Nationalist strength totaled less than 14,000,000 votes. Thus Dr. Hugenberg is left out in the cold.

President von Hindenburg can enter on the second ballot with no

Paris Acclaims Setback Apparently Given Hitler

Paris, March 13 (A.P.).—Holiday crowds today hailed the apparent setback to Adolf Hitler in the German election as welcome tidings, although the newswpapers were reserved in their comment.

Le Journal said the aims of Hitler and of President Paul von Hindenberg were dentical—that both wanted to cancel reparations and abolish the restrictive clauses in the Versailles document. "They differ only as to means," the paper said.

President Pardons Woman Emigrant

Poland and Canada Joined Fight on Action to Deport Her.

Chicago, March 13 (A.P.).—A presidential pardon and the cooperation of two governments brought Mrs. Joseph Killian back to Chicago today to join her policeman husband and his three children. Mrs. Killian came to Chicago on a visit several years ago from Poland, met Killian, a widower with three children, and they became engaged to marry.

Then the Federal Government discovered that she had entered the United States on a false passport. Action was started to deport her.

The American Legion came to the policeman's aid, attorneys were hired, citizens sent petitions to President Hoover. Finally, the couple married and went to Canada on their honeymoon. Mrs. Killian was detained in Windsor, Ont., as an alien, while friends worked on the case. International diplomacy was called into effect, the governments of Poland and Canada cooperated, and President Hoover granted her a pardon.

SALES TAX DECISION IS LIKELY THIS WEEK

Rainey Claims Rising Favor While LaGuardia Sees Defeat of Measure.

(Associated Press.)

The dubitable fate of the new revenue bill and its bitterly opposed manufacturers' excise tax is expected to be decided in the strife torn House this week.

Sentiment for and against the sales levy on manufactured articles that is the foundation of the $1,096,000,000 bill probably will seesaw for several more days before a definite trend becomes obvious despite the claims of opponents and advocates.

Representative Rainey, of Illinois, the Democratic leader, yesterday said: "There is a perceptible swing toward the sales tax among the membership, despite the onslaughts of the opposition. The turning point came yesterday, with the speech of Representative Huddleston (Democrat), Alabama. We have not given up hope. Instead, we have more confidence in our belief that it will be adopted."

On the other hand, Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York, author of a substitute plan, forecast the 2.25 per cent levy on sales would be defeated. He predicted it would be sent back to the ways and means committee with instructions to substitute heavy levies on selected industries, and an increase in first-class postage.

Acting Chairman Crisp plans to call the committee tomorrow to consider proposed amendments to the sales provision looking to the elimination of additional foods, canned and otherwise processed, which would reduce the revenue from about $595,000,000 to $585,000,000. Meanwhile, general debate will enter the fourth day today and will be permitted to run late into the week in order that every member desiring to discuss the measure will have his chance.

"We have won our major objective in making the House and the people of the country realize the importance of balancing the budget in 1933," Mr. Rainey said. "Those who have opposed

SWEDEN GRANTS MORATORUM IN KREUGER DEATH

PERMITS COMPANIES TO ARRANGE FINANCE

Match Firms and Associates Given Until March 31; Banks Held Safe.

Stockholm, Sweden (Monday), March 14 (A.P.).—Both chambers of the Swedish Riksdag today adopted a bill authorizing the government to grant companies or persons a short moratorium on payment of debts. The action was a repercussion to the death of Ivar Kreuger, the Swedish match king, who killed himself in a Paris apartment Saturday just before he was to have held a financial conference.

Minister of Finance Felix Bamrin opened the debate in the upper chamber and emphasized that the powers conferred in the measure would be employed with the utmost caution and with respect to national as wel las private interests.

Socialist Deputy Moeller replied that, although Parliament had granted three vast powers, it did not intend to forego the right to criticize whatever measures the government should take.

Utmost Prudence Urged.

Premier Carl Ekman made a statement in the Lower Chamber similar to that of the finance minister and a Communist spokesman echoed Deputy Moeller's sentiments. A Socialist member urged the government to exercise the utmost prudence and to maintain full contact with Parliament.

The debate in each chamber lasted only a quarter of an hour.

The cabinet met immediately after the measure was adopted and considered a request from the Kreuger & Toll Co. for a moratorium on their obligations until March 31. The request was phrased as follows:

"On account of the death of Ivar Kreuger it is necessary for the directors (of Kreuger & Toll) to make an investigation and to survey the company's engagements. In order to be enabled to do this without disturbance and having regard for the firm's large operations, the company requests the government to grant a respite until the end of March for payment of the debts of the company.

Affiliated Companies Included.

"The same respite is requested for certain affiliated companies and certain persons in the Kreuger & Toll Co. who are personally liable for some of the company's engagements."

After some debate the government decided to extend a moratorium to Kreuger & Toll as well as to three smaller connected concerns, to Kreu-

Ohio Republican Decries Dry Law in Senate Race

Columbus, Ohio, March 13 (A.P.).—Denouncing prohibition as illogical, governmentally unsound and defeating temperance, Attorney General Gilbert Bettman, Republican candidate for the nomination of United States senator, today declared for modification of the eighteenth amendment and of the Volstead law as one of the chief planks of his platform. He opposed any attempt to repeal prohibition at this time.

The attorney general advocates modification of the eighteenth amendment to permit each State to decide for itself whether it shall have prohibition or some modified plan of controlling liquor sales.

HAWAIIAN HELD IN NEW ATTACK; NOOSE SOUGHT

Police Chief Will Seek Hanging of Oriental Prisoner.

CHINESE GIRL OF 17 IS LATEST VICTIM

Assailant Put Her Escort to Flight and Choked Her Screams.

Honolulu, March 13 (A.P.).—A 17-year-old Chinese girl was brutally assaulted late last night in Honolulu's third attack upon a woman within two weeks.

Two hours later police arrested Joseph Young, Korean-Hawaiian, whom the city's new chief of police said he would 'attempt to have hanged.

Badly bruised and showing evidence of having been choked, the girl, Bernice Lum, said she left a private dance shortly before midnight with Gilbert Halm, Chinese, for a walk.

They were sitting on the steps of a nearby residence, the girl related, when Young approached. The girl and her escort said that Young, a huge fellow, told Halm to "scram." Halm, a youth of slight stature, departed.

Noose Declared Ready.

Young, police were told, then choked the girl and attacked her. Neighbors, attracted by her screams, arrived after her assailant had fled.

Halm and Edward Lau, Chinese friend of Young, were also taken into custody.

C. F. Weeber, appointed police chief when the department was reorganized six weeks ago following recent disorders, recalled the indictment and sentence to life imprisonment ten days ago of John Fernandez, who admitted attacking a Japanese woman.

"The only way to deal with this situation," said Weeber, "is to hang the criminals guilty of assaulting women. I believe in the salutary effect of the noose."

New Hanging Law Ready.

Capital punishment in such cases was provided for in a measure passed by the recent special session of the territorial legislature.

The police chief said that he would ask John C. Kelley, recently appointed public prosecutor, to call a special session of the grand jury for tomorrow.

The assault upon Miss Lum occurred just two weeks after Mrs. Kathleen Hope, wife of a naval enlisted man, was attacked in her home, which is in the same neighborhood—near Waikiki Beach.

All Aboard Saved As Ship Hits Reef

84 Passengers and Crew Rescued Off Bermuda; Storm Is Blamed.

Hamilton, Bermuda, March 13 (A.P.).—The Canadian National steamship Prince David, out of Boston with 84 passengers for Bermuda, struck a reef 12 miles off Hamilton today and began sinking. All her passengers and crew were transferred to the Canadian National steamer Lady Somers. All were saved.

The accident was blamed on poor visibility in a blinding rainstorm, and occurred just before the Prince David picked up her pilot.

The Lady Somers, which also was bound for Bermuda, picked up everybody on the distressed craft and took them to St. Georges. The Prince David was sinking slowly late today with her decks awash, and it was feared she would be a total loss.

Titled Flying Couple Lost In Africa; Search Ordered

Algiers, March 13 (U.P.).—The French government today ordered a search in Africa for the Count and Countess de Sibour, famous for their world-wide air jaunts and now feared lost in the dangerous interior wastelands, over which they were flying in a tourist plane.

The countess is the former Violette Selfridge, daughter of the American, H. Gordon Selfridge, who is outstanding in London's business world.

Accompanied by the French mechanic, Damet, they left Dakar, in Senegal on the west coast of Africa, on February 26 and have not been reported since, the air ministry at Paris informed colonial authorities in ordering a search by French air forces in Africa.

The ministry said the count and countess were flying a tourist monoplane and carrying spare parts to the French flier, Mme. Maryse Hilz, who at that time was stranded at Niamey, while attempting to make a flight from France to Madagascar.

French airmen said they believed the De Sibour plane had been forced down in some isolated and probably uncharted forest or desert land in the region of Nigeria or Cameroons. There are no airfields there and the search probably will be extremely difficult unless some word is received to guide the rescue fliers.

The route from Dakar to Nigeria is over desert wastelands to the heart of Africa, a distance of some 1,800 miles. The De Sibours have had wide experience in flying over unfamiliar routes and they could be depended on to make the most of any unfortunate circumstances should they be forced to land far from any interior town.

FINGERPRINTS FAIL TO HELP LINDBERGH CASE SOLUTION; BABY CLEW ALSO FRUITLESS

Tennessee Suspect Is Not Kidnaped Infant.

RESEMBLANCE 'VERY MARKED'

Colonel Satisfied That Baby Held in South Is Not His.

Crossville, Tenn., March 13 (A.P.). A country storekeeper's suspicions that a baby lodged for the night at a neighbor's boarding house was the missing Charles Augustus Lindburgh, jr., upset the Sabath calm of this little mountain town today, and brought on an unprecedented "boom."

People poured in by automobile and airplane as the news spread and the 1,500 normal population soon is outnumbered three to one by visitors.

The Curly-haired baby was placed under close guard by authorities. Physicians who examined the infant said, however, that while the resemblance was "very marked" discrepancies were noted from the broadcast descriptions of the famous flier's son.

Colonel Asks Detention.

Sheriff Baxter Swicegood held the two couples traveling with the child on technical charges of suspicion. He said he talked to Col. Lindbergh by telephone and was asked to hold the baby until definite identity was established. He wired a description of the baby to Col. Lindbergh.

One of the items in the baby's description that failed to tally was weight. The child held here weighs 24 pounds, while the weight of the Lindbergh baby has been given in police circulars sent throughout the Nation as 27 to 30 pounds.

The four persons held gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. John M. Young and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Mitchell. Swicegood said they told him they had no home and were just "traveling around."

(R. C. Gwyn, Commonwealth's attorney for Smyth County, Va., said four persons and a baby of the same names were held for four days at Marion, Va., on March 3, but satisfied the authorities there the child was not the Lindbergh baby.)

Admission Charge Alleged.

Sheriff Swicegood said Col. Lindbergh told him to look for a mole on either the hand or foot, the sheriff did not understand which. Dr. E. W. Mitchell, who with Dr. V. L. Lewis examined the child, said he could find no such marking. Sheriff Swicegood said the baby has a wart on its right thumb and a scar on its right temple, apparently caused by a pimple. J. C. Beech, operator of a tourist camp at Dean Station near Knoxville, reported the two couples stopped there on Friday and had with them a printed sign: "See the kid that resembles the Lindbergh baby. Admission, 15 cents."

"We have placed pictures by the side of the baby and note a very marked resemblance," Dr. Mitchell told reporters. He said Col. Lindbergh inquired of Sheriff Swicegood how many teeth the child had, but

MRS. REBEKAH GREATHOUSE.

CAPTORS' SKILL HELD GOOD SIGN FOR BABY

Mrs. Rebekah Greathouse, Cousin of Lindbergh Baby, Voices Optimism.

(Associated Press.)

A lawyer cousin of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, jr., yesterday saw the apparent skill of the 20-month-old boy's abductors as an argument for his safe return.

The relative was Mrs. Rebekah Greathouse, a first cousin, long close to Anne Morrow Lindbergh. She dropped her duties as an assistant United States Attorney for the District of Columbia to go to the Morrow home in New Jersey on the day after the kidnaping, and remained there and in Princeton for several days. Since then she has been in communication with members of the family by telephone.

"What comforts me most is the skill of the kidnapers," she said. "It seems to me that if they could accomplish the thing as they did, they ought to be clever enough to get him home unharmed—particularly with every assistance available."

It was evident that Morris Rosner, supposed go-between in efforts to recover Baby Lindbergh, was as much a mystery man to Mrs. Greathouse as he is said to be to police.

But she removed this circumstance from consideration as a disclaimer of Rosner's publicly expressed optimism by explaining that the great anxiety

Liner Saves 26 on Tug Sinking Off Nova Scotia

Halifax, Nova Scotia, March 13 (A.P.).—The Canadian Pacific liner Montcalm early today rescued Capt. R. Featherstone and 25 members of the crew of the sinking tug Reindeer, about 80 miles off Sambro Lightship.

The rescue was effected in darkness after the Montcalm sprayed oil on the waters.

Marks Can Not Be Matched to Any Criminal.

AMATEUR JOB IS SUSPECTED

Secret Agents Missing; Police Admit No Progress.

(Copyright, 1932, by the United Press.)

Hopewell, N. J., March 13 (U.P.).—Two sets of fingerprints were found on the window sill of the Lindbergh nursery on the night of the kidnaping, the United Press was informed tonight by a high official investigating the crime. One of these sets of fingerprints was repeated inside the room, and both sets were those of men.

Refutation of previous stories that no fingerprints were found inside the room from which Charles Augustus Lindbergh, jr., was stolen came from a source regarded as authoritative. According to the United Press informant, the fingerprints on the window sill pointed in, toward the room. One footprint also appeared on the sill.

New Theory of Method.

Reconstructing the kidnaping, this authority said there was no question but that the first kidnaper ascended the ladder and entered the room. The second followed him and received the baby from his hands.

Upon reaching the ground, according to this theory, the two men walked rapidly away with the child. In addition to the plaster casts of footprints made by shoes which evidently were covered by stockings or cloth, there was a set of footprints made by a pair of heavy boots.

Two hundred yards from the house, these two tracks were joined by the prints of a woman's shoes.

The United Press also was informed that checkup of the fingerprints revealed no known criminals to whom they could be assigned.

Daring Amateurs Suspected.

The theory now held, it was stated, is that if professional criminals were involved they may have hired workmen to commit the actual kidnaping.

On the other hand, the fact that investigation of the fingerprints disclosed no known criminal, may be taken as an indication that the plot

Lindberghs Take Outdoor Exercise

Walk as Diversion From Strain of Search for Kidnaped Son.

Hopewell, N. J., March 13 (A.P.).—Both Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh chose outdoor walks today as a diversion from the strain of the search for their stolen son.

Mrs. Lindbergh, wearing a dark suit, spent half an hour strolling down a lane near the hilltop home with a maid in the household. She had dinner in the dining room of the country residence with her mother, Mrs. Dwight Morrow, and Mrs. Henry Breckenridge, wife of Col. Lindbergh's intimate friend and attorney.

Col. Lindbergh tramped through nearby woods and ate a chicken dinner with State policemen. It was learned from a reliable source that Morris Rosner, undercover man seeking the kidnaped child, was a visitor at the Lindbergh home during the day.

Miss Rodgers' Elopement Causes Conflicting Stories

Parents of Titled Young Italian Deny Marriage While Aunt of American Girl Admits Couple "Ran Off Together" and Will Wed.

Rome, March 13 (A.P.).—The names of a titled young Italian, the Marchese Lorenzo Solari, and Alicia Rodgers, granddaughter of the late American Ambassador to Italy, George Von L. Meyer, were linked in a tale of romance tonight, but official information was limited to conflicting statements from their families.

The family of the 18-year-old Alicia said the couple ran away last Wednesday and added they would be married as soon as the necessary arrangements could be made. The girl's parents reside in Washington, D. C.

The lad's father, head of the Marconi interests in Italy, insisted his son had not run away, and that there would be no marriage.

What happened between Wednesday and today was obscure, but apparently the couple, if they did run away, did not wed, and both were under their respective families' wings.

Miss Rodgers was with her grandmother, Mrs. George Von L. Meyer, widow of the late Ambassador, and her aunt, the Contessa Brambilla. The Contessa said she regretted publicity in the affair, but felt that in fairness to Alicia, the family was obliged to explain the situation.

"We really opposed the marriage," the countess said, "only because we had no desire for Alicia to marry into a family that objected to this marriage.

"But youth is youth—and the young people, because of opposition from both sides, took matters into their own hands and ran off together Wednesday.

"We would have preferred a normal, dignified wedding, of course. Since the young people are in love with each other, we expect they will be married shortly.

"The young marchese is 22 years old, and therefore over the age of the recent marriage law and needs no parental consent. He is now with the militia, but various formalities, such as publication of the banns, as required in Italy, doubtless will be arranged soon."

Yesterday the lad's father, head of the Marconi interests in Italy, insisted the marchese was ill and under his care, adding that elopment reports were absolutely false.

"I am unalterably opposed to any such marriage, and it will not take place," he said. "My son has not tried to get married. He is only 20 and has military service to do."

The two families apparently disagreed as to the youth's age.

HOUSE VOTES TODAY ON LIQUOR CONTROL

Record Wet Poll Conceded in Showdown on Home Rule Proposal.

(Associated Press.)

For the first time since prohibition's event, members of the House who do not prefer absence today must answer a roll call striking directly at the eighteenth amendment.

Culminating long years of agitation, a showdown will be had on whether a majority of the House wants to consider a constitutional amendment for State liquor control. The issue was forced by organized wets and secured 145 signatures on a petition to get the ballot.

Proponents of the Beck-Linthicum resolution claimed as high as 180 votes, counting heavily on doubtful representatives wearing frowns of political worry. Prohibitionists equally were confident of victory, though conceding the largest wet poll in a decade.

Majority Is Doubtful.

Representative Rainey, the Democratic leader, yesterday estimated the maximum strength on the ballot at 155 to 160, figures which include his own support.

"If as many vote for the resolution as the wets claim," Mr. Rainey said, "it will be enough for a majority and the House may be forced to drop the tax bill temporarily and proceeed immediately on the amendment. However, my guess is nearer 160, and I don't think that number will prove sufficient for a majority."

This estimate was based upon the average votes cast in recent roll calls.

Wets in Final Drive.

In a last hour drive for support, the wet bloc leaders were seeking votes of the Rainey type—the Illinois leader is "as dry as ever," but will pursue his policy of 30 years in Congress and vote in the direction that would give the people an opportunity to pass on a controversial public policy.

Representative Britten (Republican), Illinois, one of the amendment advocates, said that "any member of Congress who tomorrow by his vote refuses to allow his constituents and mine to vote on an amendment to the eighteenth amendment which would give the States of the Union the right to regulate their own beer and alcoholic traffic within their own borders will certainly stand in a sorry light when he appears before his people in the November elections."

Liquor Tax Stressed.

In other quarters, prospects of a liquor tax to supplant huge levies proposed in the billion-dollar revenue bill, were offered as an incentive to support of the home-rule plan. Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, said in a statement:

"Favorable action by this Congress will enable the next Congress to lift from the shoulders of the people the new billion-dollar tax burden which is now about to be put upon us.

"The procedure is possible and simple. The legislatures elected in November will convene next January and they can arrange for the popular election of delegates to State conventions in November of 1933.

Sees Ratification Certain.

"The conventions can meet in January of 1934 and 36 of them will certainly ratify the repeal of national prohibition and thus enable the States to install reasonable liquor control, systems of their own in conformity with the wishes of their people and the advancement of temperance.

"Thereupon Congress can at once substitute for these new and unusual taxes an excise revenue system which will bring in a billion dollars a year, and the whole nightmare will be over by July 1, 1934, just exactly the date of expiration of these extraordinary taxes recommended and predicted by President Hoover."

Should a majority of members voting support the resolution for submission, it would be a mandate to force its consideration in the House. However, a two-thirds majority would be needed to send the resolution to the Senate.

Plea of Crusaders.

Another organization opposed to prohibition, The Crusaders, in an open letter to members of Congress said: "Take your courage in your hands, Mr. Congressman, vote 'aye' on Monday and give the American people an opportunity to free themselves from the withering hand of the Anti-Saloon League."

The letter, sent to all members of Congress except those from Kansas, was signed by Rufus S. Lusk, executive vice commander, and said "The Crusaders feel it is hopeless to get any member from that arid State (Kansas) * * * to vote for consideration of the resolution."

Ernest H. Cherrington, chairman of the national prohibition board of strategy, said yesterday the official record of members of Congress who were members when the Volstead act was adopted, "would appear to be a more authoritative indication of the trend and attitude of senatorial and congressional constituencies than all the straw votes taken by newspapers and magazines."

Statement of Cherrington.

Cherrington's formal statement said in part:

"There are 150 members of the present Congress who were members of the two houses of Congress when the Volstead law was enacted in 1919. Of these, 14 are recorded as not having voted either way on the Volstead law, 21 voted against it, while 115 voted for its enactment.

"In the Senate today there are three members who were members of the Sixty-sixth Congress and who did not vote either way on the Volstead law. There are four Senators who voted against that law, 2 of whom since that time have repeatedly and consistently voted in support of the prohibition policy, while there are 33 present senators who voted for the law.

"In the House of Representatives today there are eleven members who did not vote either way on the Volstead law. There are seventeen members of the present House who voted against that law. There are 82 of the present members who voted for the law, while eleven other members of the House in the Sixty-sixth Congress who voted for the law are now members of the Senate."

Motor Truck Laws Undergo Drastic Changes in Virginia

Six Measures Enacted by Recent Legislature Increase License Fees and Otherwise Revise Provisions; Hitch-Hiking Illegal; Permits Required.

By JEROME FANCIULLI.
(Chairman, Executive Committee, Virginia Motor Truck Owners Assn.)

Richmond, Va., March 13.—Measures destined to reduce highway accidents, facilitate motor vehicle traffic, promote enforcement of regulations, increase revenue through higher truck taxes, eliminate unconstitutional features in existing motor vehicle laws and codify within one act the taxation and regulation of all but common carrier motor vehicles are incorporated in six separate bills which wer enacted into law by the Legislature which adjourned last night.

The new motor vehicle code, the last of the sextet to be finally acted upon, will leave the private automobile owner practically unaffected as to motor vehicle taxes. Traveling salesmen and all others who operate cars or trucks not their own, in connection with their occupation, will be classed as professional chauffeurs. They will be required to pay $5 a year for a chauffeur's permit, all such permits expiring on March 31 of each year. Other than slightly more severe regulations covering brakes, lights and horns, there are no changes of serious import to the private automobile owner contained in the new code.

The motor truck and bus provisions of the bill represent the culmination of a closely contested fight during the past ten months between the railroads and the truck owners of the State, with the certificated freight and passenger common carrier operators on the side lines to see that their interests were not endangered. That the truck owners were victorious is not only indicated by the moderation of the changes affecting them as the bill was finally enacted compared to the original proposals, but also by the apparent complete capitulation of the antitruck spokesmen in the last hours of the Legislature, when the friends of motor truck transportation won on all of the most controversial questions in connection with the truck features of the bill.

Owners Formed Association.

Aroused by public utterances of T. McCall Frazier, State director of motor vehicles, last May, proposing or suggesting higher license fees for motor trucks, the farmers and business interests in all sections of the State girded for the anticipated battle in the Legislature by forming a State-wide motor truck owners association. Shortly afterward Gov. Pollard appointed a special bus and truck legislation commission.

When the Senate committee finally reported the House bill it compromised the weight limitation at 35,000 pounds, the length at 50 feet, and restored the speed limit of 45 miles per hour for all trucks. It made no modification in the strict nonresident requirements passed by the House, which would have required every traveling salesman or other person bent on business, as well as all trucks, to purchase Virginia licenses if they entered the State more than three times in one month.

Led by Senator Cather, of Winchester, the speeches in support of full reciprocity emphasized the importance to the economical welfare of the State of free trade with other States. Senator Cather read the Senate The Washington Post editorial on the subject from last Monday's issue. Stressing the importance to Virginia farmers and industries of the wide distribution and flexible character of truck transportation, Senators Rust, of Fairfax; Connor, of Loudoun; Norris, of Lancaster, and Harvey, of Pittsylvania, urged the Senate to adopt the amendment. Senator Rogers, who was chairman of the governor's special commission, stated that the commission wished to be understood as holding no position in the matter, and Senator Wickham, of Hanover, a retired railroad official, made an impassioned free trade speech in its support. Opposed only by Senator Staples, of Roanoke, the amendment was adopted without a record vote, although a similar amendment had failed in the House.

Although it originally provided greatly increased license fees on all sizes of trucks through a scale based on gross weight of vehicle and load, as finally adopted the bill did not increase the existing fees on freight vehicles up to two tons capacity. Above the two-ton capacity a gradually increasing differential over the present law was provided, so that the five-ton truck will carry a registration fee of $50 more in the future. Heretofore the law has not provided any fee for trucks of more than five tons capacity, but the new law will provide a scale of fees graduated up to the ten-ton truck, which will be required to pay $1,150.

While trucks operated for hire solely to carry farm products and lumber to market have heretofore been exempted from paying the extra fee assessed the contract carriers, the new law will have no such exemption. It has been claimed by Mr. Frazier and others that this exemption is unconstitutional. The new law will exact an extra levy of 50 per cent of the private truck fee as an additional charge on for hire trucks. It will also require owners of this class of vehicles to charge a hauling fee that is no less than the rates established by the State Corporation Commission for common carriers. This provision was the last amendment to the bill and was proposed by Senator Staples, of Roanoke. The truck interests made no opposition to it, claiming that the Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly determined that a contract carrier cannot be subjected to rate regulation, intrastate or interstate.

Other truck regulations as finally enacted were a gross weight limitation of 24,000 pounds for a single vehicle and 35,000 pounds for a combination of vehicles; a maximum over-all length of 45 feet exclusive of coupling and bumper, for a combination and 33 feet for a single vehicle, as against 85 feet and 33 feet respectively in the present law; maximum speed of 45 miles per hour, and places no limit on the load that may be carried, except that provided by the maximum gross weight allowances for single and multiple vehicles, the present legal requirement of 1 inch width of tire for each 650 pounds of gross weight, and a maximum allowance of 16,000 pounds to an axle. Trailers and semitrailers will have to pay license fees equivalent to one-half the truck fees and combinations will be limited to two vehicles.

Hitch-Hiking Unlawful.

Other new provisions enacted by the Assembly will make hitch-hiking unlawful, will require operators to have driver's permits on much the same basis as other States, will require evidence of financial responsibility following accidents involving unpaid damage judgments; will prohibit operation of a motor vehicle by youths under 16 years of age, and will not permit continuous driving by one person for more than thirteen hours out of 24.

Registration tags will be transferable from one vehicle to another in the same manner as provided by the present law, but not from one owner to another. No provision is made for rebating the unexpired portion of the license fee when a vehicle is transferred from one owner to another. Nonresidents who obtain employment within the State for 60 days or more will no longer be able to use the registration tags of their home State. They will be required to buy Virginia licenses. All for-hire vehicles will be required to have displayed thereon the name and address of the owner in letters not less than 2 inches high.

Hucksters will have to buy for-hire license tags, and, beginning April 1, 1933, the license year will terminate on March 31 instead of on December 31. Quarterly reductions in registration fees are provided for. Volunteer fire departments and charitable institutions are not exempted from purchasing license tags. Under present law hearses are required to pay a license fee of $15, but under the new motor vehicle code they are done away with entirely, or presumably the attorney general will have to decide what fee they shall be assessed in the future.

HOUSE EXPECTED TO DECIDE SALES TAX FATE THIS WEEK

the sales tax have definitely committed themselves to voting for heavy levies on automobiles, gasoline, radios and increasing postage, and they can't back out.

"We are going to pass a bill to meet the prospective $1,241,000,000 deficit, if we have to stay here all summer. It must be done, either through the just sales tax or the irritable and obnoxious war-time taxes."

With the full indorsement of the bill given by Secretary Mills at a conference Saturday with Speaker Garner, and Saturday night in a radio address a majority of the Republicans is expected by Representative Snell, of New York, party leader, to vote with the Democratic stalwarts. However, a pool made by Democratic leaders indicated that about 60 per cent of their forces were against the sales tax. Mr. Snell said he believed the bipartisan support "will put it over."

Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, said in a statement through the national committee, that as a result of the victory in 1930 elections that gave it control of the House, "the Democratic party is in the position of having to meet a deficit for which it is in nowise responsible, but the budget must be balanced if the credit of the Government is to be maintained."

Opposed by Shouse.

"No one can be more definitely opposed to a general sales tax than am I," Mr. Shouse said. "I consider it wholly undesirable, but if the present so-called manufacturers' tax, recommended by the ways and means committee and embodied in the revenue bill, should not be adopted, where can a substitute be found that will yield the necessary money and that will not prove more inequitable and more undesirable than the sales tax?"

Shouse said he was personally "in accord with those who would so change our laws as to permit the manufacture of beer with the alcoholic content of approximately 3 per cent and would place upon this beverage a tax sufficient to secure a sum virtually equal to that contemplated from the manufacturers' tax."

"I appreciate the situation in which Democrats find themselves when they have properly proposed the theory of a sales tax and when now they are confronted with a deficit created not by a Democratic administration, but by a Republican administration, which they are asked to care for," he said.

"It seems to me, however, that in present circumstances there is but one position to take and that is that a condition as serious as the crisis of war has to be met, and the only way it can be met is by preserving beyond attack the credit of our Government. Whatever sacrifice may be necessary to that end must be made."

Ayres Questions Accuracy.

Representative Ayres (Democrat), of Kansas, in a statement questioned the accuracy of the estimate of the Treasury that but $5,000,000 would be derived from the 1-cent-a-gallon tax in the bill on imported petroleum.

The Kansan said the Treasury had made mistakes of hundreds of millions in estimates of revenue from time to time and expressed the opinion that if the annual importations of foreign oil fell below "the 105,000,000 barrels imported oil and refined products which entered this country at the very time that American producers had curtailed their production 109,000,000 barrels below the figures of the previous years, it would still be sufficiently large to net a pleasant revenue."

"Any reduction in the importation of foreign oil would be compensated by the increased production of American petroleum, which pays heavy State taxes and pays to the Federal Government large sums in corporation taxes, and incomes taxes," he said. "These taxes have not been very considerable in the past few years when the foreign oil dominated the American market."

Meanwhile, letters and telegrams poured in on the House members protesting virtually all phases of the revenue bill.

Hard Winter for Quail.

Reno, Nev. (U.P.).—It was a tough winter on quail in Nevada. Snows covered feed for long periods, but sport-loving ranchers cooperated with game authorities and rode horseback through the valleys placing feed. It is estimated that the lives of 1,500 quail were saved.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS MEET ANOTHER SNAG

Japan Claims Discrepancies Between China's View and League Plan.

Shanghai, March 13 (A.P.).—Sino-Japanese peace negotiations struck another snag today despite the efforts of neutral mediators to avoid it.

The difficulty apparently was over an interpretation of withdrawal of the Japanese forces as provided in a League of Nations peace plan last week, and to which plan both sides have been credited with expressing a willingness to abide.

The Chinese stand was upon the firm contention that there must be complete withdrawal of Japanese forces from the Shanghai area without any conditions whatever.

Discrepancies Claimed.

The Japanese negotiators emphasized there were discrepancies between the Chinese attitude and the league resolution, pointing out that the word "complete" does not appear in the resolution in connection with the withdrawal of Japanese forces.

Wellington Koo and T. V. Soong, Chinese leaders, who had just conferred with Premier Wang Ching-Wei, and the Chinese generalissimo, Chiang Kai-Shek, at Nanking, tonight issued a statement, in which they made a three-point demand upon Japan.

Asks Definite Cessation.

It said: "China asks only for a definite cessation of hostilities to end the havoc of destruction; a prompt withdrawal of Japanese troops so as to remove a most potent threat to peace; and renunciation of further aggression as evidence of good faith.

"In short, China demands nothing which is not guaranteed to her by international law or treaties. She awaits peace and waits upon Japan for its realization."

Nanking, March 13 (A.P.).—Foreign Minister Lo Wen Kan, of the Nanking government, today said China did not vote on the peace plan of the League of Nations on March 11 because of a telegraphic delay in instructions.

HINDENBURG FAILS TO WIN IN ELECTION

strings attached to him and he may feel as humanly sure of election as any one can be of anything in Germany in these troubled times.

All candidates are allowed to run on the second ballot, but it is considered likel ythat only Hindenburg, Hitler and Thaelman will do so.

Analysis of the election returns revealed the interesting fact that Hitler ran behind Von Hindenburg in all districts where the Nazis were partly or wholly in control, namely, Thuringia, Brunswick and Hessen. He also fell behind in Bavaria, where his Facist movement was born.

Leads in Only Three Districts.

In only three of the nation's 35 districts was the Nazi leader ahead. These were the rural Provinces of Pomerania and Schleswig-Holstein and the industrial district of Chemnitz-Zwickau.

However, although Hitler's vote was not nearly so large as had been anticipated, the fact remained his party gained enormously over the 1930 Reichstag election, when only 6,580,000 votes were cast for Nazi candidates.

Whether, on the other hand, the Nationalist party now is the strongest in the Reich is open to doubt, as Hitler's personal popularity is conceded to be greater than the popularity of his party. Only another Reichstag election could show the present national Socialist strength.

4,900,000 for Communists.

Another surprising fact of the election was the failure of the Communists, with their 4,900,000 votes, to improve appreciably on their 1930 figures. In that year they obtained 4,590,000.

Fears had been expressed in some quarters that the Socialists might disobey party instructions to vote for Von Hindenburg and might instead go to the Communist Thaelmann. These fears were shown to be unfounded. Social Democracy gave an excellent example of discipline by voting for a man whose philosophy of life runs counter to theirs, but whose honesty and integrity they respect.

Another interesting feature of the election was the strong indorsement given President von Hindenburg by the Rhineland and Westphalia, where the voters evidently were grateful to him for his loyal support of the late Dr. Gustav Stresemann in efforts to liberate these provinces. Of the 7,456,000 votes cast in the four Rhenish and two Westhaplian districts, Von Hindenburg received 53 per cent.

Manuscripts of Jefferson Given University of Virginia

Letters Regarding Early History of Famous Institution Are Presented by William A. Clark, Jr., Alumnus of 1899; Many Never Published.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 13.—Two sets of Jefferson manuscripts, of unusual interest because they are intimately connected with the beginnings of the University of Virginia, have been presented to the Virginia collection in the university library by William Andrews Clark, jr., of Los Angeles, Calif., alumnus of 1899.

Eighteen letters written by Jefferson to his friend Gen. John Hartwell Cocke, during the years from 1813 to 1826, comprise the first set. They were, until recently, in possession of the Cocke family, and have never been published as a whole.

Gen. Cocke was one of the founders of the university and was an important member of the first board of visitors. These personal letters comment frankly on the problems involved in the establishment of the institution. In them such matters are discussed as the progress of the buildings, the site of the botanical gardens, difficulties with the Italian sculptors, the water supply, the leak in the rotunda dome, the curriculum, the selection of the faculty, the raising of money, and the purchase of books for the library.

The second set consists of manuscript specifications drawn up by Jefferson for the construction of the first buildings. This set was formerly the property of Dr. W. M. Randolph, of Charlottesville, Va., and the contents have been published in part in the book on Jefferson's architecture, by Dr. William A. Lambeth, of the university faculty.

Jefferson's specifications contain a description of each proposed structure, illustrated by sketches, and give with maticulous care the measurements, the materials, the amounts of brick and stone and all the other details necessary for the construction of the university's first buildings.

Notes that were added from time to time suggest that these specifications were carried by Jefferson on his almost daily trips from Monticello to the university while the buildings that now form the lawn and the ranges were being put up.

In the opinion of Harry L. Clemons, librarian, these manuscripts given by Mr. Clark form one of the most important and appropriate contributions to the history of the University of Virginia that has ever been received for the Virginia collection.

War Photo Censor Of Army Criticized

Publisher Was Refused Pictures Showing Horrors of Battle.

(Associated Press.)

The War Department was criticized in a statement yesterday by George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher, for refusing to release for publication pictures depicting the gruesome results of war.

Putnam quoted Maj. Gen. Irving J. Carr, chief of the Signal Corps, as saying readers may see the photographic records of the "pretty" side of war, but not the horrible aspects, because that would be against public policy.

The publisher said in his statement he thought the pictures should be available "to any reputable citizen ready to pay the routine fee for their use" and that it "seems unsound that the Army should decide what war photographs a publisher may use."

U. S. STEEL UPHOLDS STRENGTH TRADITION

Though Its Profits Declined in 1931, Corporation Still on Firm Basis.

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—Despite the vanishing of profits and the maintenance of dividends from surplus during 1931, the complete annual report of the United States Steel Corporation, published today, again showed the strong financial position which has become traditional with this industrial giant.

Current assets as of December 31 amounted to $494,532,807, as against current liabilities of $63,881,148. A year previously current assets were $578,273,000, and current liabilities $108,873,455.

At the end of 1931 the corporation listed cash or equivalent of $150,806,329, compared with $197,807,000 a year previously. Of the cash account as of December 31 last, the actual funds in hand or in demand deposits with banks amounted to $75,239,562.

Maintenance and Repairs.

Total assets at the end of 1931 were carried on the books at $2,279,802,812, as reduced from $2,394,545,000 at the end of 1930. Inventories were carried at the close of the year at $302,599,748, a reduction of approximately $20,000,000 from a year earlier. Charges for maintenance of plants and repairs, depreciation, obsolescence, etc., were $107,737,302, off about 30 per cent from similar charges in 1930, presumably reflecting in part the decreased rate of operations.

The annual earnings statement, as previously indicated by the quarterly statements, showed the least profitable year in the history of the corporation. Actual earnings from operations failed by $833,894 to meet charges for depreciation, depletion an obsolescence. Nevertheless, interest of $5,469,623, and total common and preferred dividends of $62,203,626 were paid. A partial offset was a credit of $19,341,659, largely representing profit from the sale of the Gary, Ind., utility property, so the net deficit for the year was $49,165,485.

Preferred dividends amount to $25,219,677 annually. When the corporation declared a quarterly common dividend of 50 cents for the last quarter of 1931, it was stated that continuance of common dividends must depend upon improvement in earnings. Thus far in 1932, trade reports have indicated little if any change. Directors meet again for dividend action April 26.

Note of Optimism.

The corporation's report, signed by J. P. Morgan as chairman of the board, sounded a note of optimism, as to the longer range outlook, in the following paragraph:

"The average annual production during the ten years, 1922 to 1931, inclusive, was 43,000,000 tons, compared with 26,000,000 tons in 1931. It seems reasonable to suppose that on the basis of average demands in the United States for steel products during the past ten years, the requirements of this company, for maintenance and current uses alone, exclusive of development and expansion, should call for steel products in considerably greater tonnage than was consumed in 1931."

The total volume of sales during 1931, not including intersubsidiary sales, was $492,872,716, off nearly 36 per cent from 1930. The number of full-time employes shrunk from 76,260 persons in the first quarter to 35,674 in the last quarter, but in keeping with the policy of maintaining employment, part-time workers were 146,482 in the final quarter, only 3,302 less than in the first. The year's total payroll was $266,871,413, off about 32 per cent from 1930. Wages were reduced 10 per cent on October 1.

CLARENDON TRAFFIC VIOLATORS WARNED

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Cla. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Disregard for parking laws along the side streets in the center of Clarendon has resulted in a warning from the county police that unless the law governing parking is recognized motorists will find themselves before County Judge B. M. Hedrick.

With the narrow streets in the center section of Clarendon, persons must park their cars close to the curb, the police say.

A survey of the condition on Saturday night revealed that in some cases persons in parking their cars disregarded private driveways and persons living in that section were unable to reach their homes until the owners of the cars were located.

Due to the narrow streets efforts to provide for one-way parking will be made.

To aid in the advancement of the week-day religious educational classes announcement is made that there has been organized in Arlington County a Woman's Auxiliary Council of Religious Education with Mrs. C. P. Hiens, of Arlington, as the chairman.

President Walter K. Handy, of the Arlington County Week-day Religious Educational Council, announces that Mrs. I. Steenson has been appointed as an assistant to Miss Ethel Morrison, director. Mrs. Steenson will have charge of the class at the Henry Clay School at Lyon Park. The classes will meet in the Virginia Avenue Christian Church, near the school.

The Arlington-Fairfax Counties Volunteer Firemen's Association will hold its March meeting tomorrow evening at the Clarendon Firemen's Hall at 8 o'clock.

There will be a special meeting of the Arlington County Business and Professional Woman's Club this evening at the home of the president, Mrs. M. W. Willis, Arlington Experimental Farm.

All members are urged to attend, as amendments to the constitution and by-laws will be voted upon.

In 1925, Father Strittmatter went abroad to study and returned to this country in 1927 when he entered St. Anselm's Priory. He spent 1929 and 1930 at the Portsmouth Priory. He has specialized in the study of Catholic antiquity, medieval church history and ancient church history. Through the Guggenheim Foundation fellowship he plans to go abroad in about a year to study the Byzantine rite and the history of church worship at the Vatican Library in Rome. He intends to spend about ten months in a study of these subjects.

The Benedictine's accomplishments include the writing of a number of articles and the preparation of the Latin texts of two of the minor works of John Milton. These two volumes will comprise a part of the 20 volume University of Columbia edition of Milton, to be published soon.

Dr. Wulf is employed in the fixed research laboratory of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils at the Department of Agriculture. Born at Norwich, Conn., he received his B. S. degree at Worcester Political Institution at Worcester, Mass. He received his M. S. degree at American University in this city and his Ph. D. at California Institute of Technology in 1926. He then went to the University of California as a national research fellow from the National Research Council of this city. He entered the Department of Agriculture in 1928.

Dr. Wulf's most recent work has been in the field spectroscopic and photochemical investigations of nitrogen and its compounds. The purpose of these investigations, he explained, has been to obtain a better understanding of the chemical reaction by which nitrogen is brought into combination with other substances, nitrogen being an important constituent of fertilizer.

Dr. Wulf has also been associated with the Smithsonian Institution in connection with studies of the ozone of the atmosphere. He plans to go to Germany early in the fall, and expects to remain there for about a year.

M. A. LITTLE ENTERS MARTINSBURG RACE

Contest for Mayoralty Nomination on Both Sides Is Assured by Act.

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 13.—A contest for the mayoralty nomination on both Republican and Democratic tickets at the city primary here April 11 was assured with the last-minute filing by M. A. Little, Republican business man and real estate operator, a few minutes before the lists were closed yesterday. His entry provides the only opposition to Mayor Chris H. Dailey, a candidate for renomination.

Mr. Little has not sought public office previously. Former Mayor George W. Appleby, Republican, who had been expected to file, in a public statement yesterday explained that his personal interests made it necessary for him to stay out of the race.

Three are entered on the Democratic side, former Mayor A. A. Smallwood, whose administration several years ago was featured by a law-enforcement campaign; Dr. C. A. Thomas, a newcomer to the list seeking public office and chairman of the city party committee, and D. C. Carver, churchman and textile worker.

There will be no primary contests for the five members of the city council. Each party has an unopposed representative in the list at the primary for four of the five seats, but their contests will not appear until the election in May. One Democrat, J. W. Thomas, is without either primary or election opposition.

The list of candidates for council: First Ward, W. W. Clark (D.), former member, and A. R. Fulk (R.); Second Ward, J. W. Thomas (D.), incumbent, unopposed at both primary and election; Third Ward, L. M. Light (R.), incumbent, and Harry I. Kuhn (D.); Fourth Ward, Emory W. Kline (R.), incumbent, and George E. Tabler (D.); Fifth Ward, George A. Becker (R.), incumbent, and Nelson Hicks (D.).

VIRGINIA MUSICIANS WILL MEET IN APRIL

Folk Dancers, Banjoists and Singers to Give Many Colonial Numbers.

Richmond, Va., March 13 (A.P.).—Champion folk dancers, players and singers from all sections of Virginia will gather in Richmond April 29 to participate in the second Virginia choral festival, scheduled for April 25 to 30, inclusive. The folk musicians will furnish the feature of the program planned for April 29.

Some of those who were heard last year will again be present, and in addition, a number of other champion folk musicians, singers and dancers will come from all over Virginia to be heard in such tunes as "Bonaparte's Retreat," "The Road to Boston," "Cripple Creek," mountain dances and sailors' hornpipes, and other songs and tunes in ancient Dorian, Mixolydian and other folk modes, brought over by the early settlers to Virginia, or of later American origin.

Frank and Ed Blevins, Jack Reedy and C. B. Wohlford, of Marion, were heard at Charlottesville, and have taken part in various folk programs since then, winning prizes in folk contests and in the White Top Mountain interstate folk festival in southwest Virginia last August. They will be heard in fiddle and banjo tunes such as "Jennie Put the Kettle On," "Hog-Eye Man," "Cluck Old Hen," "Fiddle or Dram," "Cumberland Gap" and others.

Four Cruise Brothers.

Council Cruise and his brothers, Carl, John and Thurman, of Damascus, Va., were also winners at White Top. They will be heard in dance tunes and some fine old ballads, including "The Cruel Ship's Carpenter," "Poor Betsy," "Mollie Ban," and "The Shootime of His Dear."

Horton Barker, blind singer of Loves Mill, southwest Virginia, will sing "The Turkish Rebalee," an old sea ballad brought to this country generations ago, and still found through the mountain sections, and "The Farmer's Curst Wife," a rollicking old English ballad about a woman who was so bad-tempered that even the devil would not have her.

J. P. Billings, of Leatherwood, near Danville, Va., who has been heard on several folk programs recently, will give fiddle tunes such as "Forko Dear." Messrs. Maupin, J. B. Wells, J. H. Chisolm and John Carter, champion fiddle and banjo players of Albemarle County and around that section of Virginia, will come with a number of folk dancers to take part in the Richmond program. John Carter first learned to play on a fiddle made of a cigar box, but won the silver cup in the old fiddlers' convention at Schuyler, Va., last July 4. Mr. Chisolm, fiddler, will play some old English dance tunes said by

BAY STATE'S SLATE FOR HOOVER BARED

Liggett Also Announces He Will Not Be Committeeman Again.

Boston, March 13 (A.P.).—Louis K. Liggett, Republican national committeeman, today announced the Hoover-pledged slate of delegates and delegates-at-large to the Republican national convention.

At the same time Liggett announced he was not a canddate for reelection as national committeeman and had yielded his place on the delegation to George F. Booth, Worcester publisher.

Simultaneously also he made public a letter from Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Republican national committeewoman, declining the nomination to be a delegate-at-large but expressing the hope the delegates would continue her as committeewoman.

The delegates-at-large, selected by Mr. Liggett in accordance with the power of attorney recently received from the President to do so were: George F. Booth, William Morgan Butler, of Boston, former United States Senator; Alvin T. Fuller, former governor, and Mrs. Mary Pratt Potter, of Greenfield.

Mayor James M. Curley, foremost New England supporter of the presidential candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt, today said Mr. Roosevelt's Massachusetts friends had decided Mr. Curley would head a slate of candidates for delegates pledged to the New York Governor.

The announcement apparently ended all hope of Democratic harmony in Massachusetts in the primary little more than a month away. A slate of candidates, pledged to Alfred E. Smith, was announced last week by Frank J. Donahue, chairman of the State Democratic committee. It included the names of Gov. Joseph B. Ely, United States Senators David I. Walsh and Marcus A. Coolidge and other prominent Massachusetts Democrats.

A definite break between Mr. Curley and Mr. Ely was indicated, political observers believed, in the mayor's statement that Ely, in 1930, agreed to be a candidate for governor for one term, and "would support me as his successor at the end of that term."

Sirovich's Circus Today To Give Thrills Galore

By JOHN J. DALY

TODAY is the day of days—the opening of the Sirovich circus, over on Capitol Hill.

Right this way to the Big Top and see the Greatest Show on Earth, the only time in history where the drama critics appear as performers.

On your right, ladeez an' jumpmen, the celebrated trapeze artist, Senor Don Levine, dramatic critic for women's wear, turning a triple somersault in midair—not only once, not twice, but thrice. Count 'em, as he goes over, once, twice and the third time, turning his flops.

On your left, the eminent critic, Mr. Alexander Percy Sampson, eating his own words—fed to him by the ringmaster, Senor Sirovich, whip in hand.

• • • •

IN the center ring, Samuel Slavonsky, the trained seal of the first nights—doing his stunt, walking out on the third and last act. It is his boast that he never sat through a complete play in his life, never read a book, or a magazine, or even a newspaper, except his own reviews.

Then, the elephant troupe, Jumbo Pemberton, George Cheen Nation, Hal Hammon, and Richard Hamsfield, stamping on a flock of playwrights. Watch 'em closely, ladeez an' jumpmen, and see the way they crush the life out of dramatic literature.

• • • •

DON'T miss the final number—the great chariot race—staged at stupendous expense. You will see, right before your very eyes, the celebrated chase up the aisle, in the middle of the second act, the boys dashing out of the theater, hats in their hands, scribbling frantically, racing for the presses, writing as they run, so it may be read as the great American peepul sit down to breakfast tomorrow morning—hot off the griddle, red-hot reviews, actors fried to a frizzle, plays panned, producers pilloried, actresses trampled and trod upon, like martyrs in the Roman arenas of old, thrown alive to the lions.

No tickets; free passes, with two on the aisle, for everybody. Look about you, now, before the show starts, choose your way out, and in case of fire, walk, but do not run, to the nearest exit.

Right this way, ladeez an' jumpmen, to the Big Top.

FINGERPRINTS WERE FOUND; FAIL TO MATCH CRIMINALS

was conceived and carried out by daring amateurs.

In all previous communications, the police authorities have denied reports that any fingerprints other than those of the Lindbergh family or members of their household were found in the nursery.

The fingerprints, it was definitely established at once, were not made by any of the Lindberghs, their servants, or any of the workmen who have been investigated.

Police Admit no Progress.

Hopewell, N. J., March 13 (A.P.).—The New Jersey State police today announced that their investigation had not disclosed "any definite information of a concrete nature leading to a solution" of the kidnaping of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr.

The police statement came after Sheriff Baxter Swicegood at Crossville, Tenn., aroused an anxious public by an announcement that he had detained four persons with a baby answering the description of the kidnaped infant.

The sheriff telephoned direct to Col. Lindbergh here and Tennessee physicians began an examination of the child. Some discrepancies began to appear in the physical features of the infant held in Tennessee and the known facts about the Lindbergh baby.

Statement of Police Head.

Finally late in the day, Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey State police, in a formal statement said:

"Certain characteristics and identifying marks of the baby in Tennessee differed from those of the missing child and it was definitely determined that the baby found in Tennessee has no bearing on the case."

In summarizing the police situation, Col. Schwarzkopf said:

"Continuous investigations are being conducted and numerous leads have been traced down without disclosing any definite information of a concrete nature leading to a solution of the case."

Definite announcement was made that Col. Lindbergh had spent the twelfth day since the kidnaping at his bleak hilltop home, but the whereabouts of the secret emissaries of the colonel, who are making a private hunt for the baby, was as much of an impenetrable mystery as ever.

Morris Rosner Missing.

Morris Rosner, the undercover man, who said yesterday he possessed definite knowledge the baby was safe and would be returned, was absent from his New York apartment, presumably in connection with the "delicate" work he said he was carrying on at that time.

Meantime, Henry (Red) Johnson, seaman suitor of Betty Gow, Lindbergh nursemaid, was described by Deputy Police Chief Brex, of Newark, as cleared of participating in the kidnaping. Johnson, who had been questioned since he first was detained at Hartford, Conn., a week ago last Friday, still faces deportation for illegal entry into this country in 1927.

Permitted to talk to reporters for the first time last night at Newark, Johnson made the surprising statement that he believed the kidnaping to be an "inside job." In the same breath, Johnson exonerated all members of the Lindbergh household and refused to amplify his expressed opinion.

Brex said he was convinced Johnson had telephoned Miss Gow at the Lindbergh home in Hopewell from an Englewood, N. J., drug store at 8:47 p. m. the night of the kidnaping and that Johnson visited an Englewood confectionery at 9:30 p. m. the same night.

Spitale and Bitz Still Gone.

Likewise there was no word of the activities of Salvy Spitale and Irving Bitz, the underworld intermediaries appointed by the Lindberghs a week ago today.

The police also discarded from the official search Salvator Tomaselli, who was not further identified, and Dominick Puero, a former Brooklyn grocer, who lived near the Lindbergh estate.

"His (Ppero's) absence is accounted for," said police, by the fact that he is employed in Brooklyn and visits with his family over the week end."

In eliminating "two gangs" from the inquiry Col Schwartzhopf said:

"Since the issuance of bulletin No. 5 (timed 10 p. m. Saturday), four investigators have returned from trips in Brooklyn and north Jersey after completing a check up on two gangs supposed to be connected with the case. While the information seems to be reliable, nothing was found to indicate that the men named could in any way have been involved. They have been eliminated."

Johnson Tells Movements.

Johnson said he met Miss Gow last August when the yacht of Thomas W. Lamont, on which he was a sailor, anchored off North Haven, Me. At that time Miss Gow had the baby at the Dwight Morrow summer home near North Haven.

When the Lamont yacht later was off the New Jersey palisades he renewed his acquaintance with Miss Gow, who then was at the Englewood home of the Morrows. Johnson said he had engagements with Miss Gow two or three times a week at Englewood, but he never had been to the Lindbergh home at Hopewell.

He admitted to reporters that he had entered the United States in 1927 by jumping ship when a Norwegian-American liner was docked in New York.

He has hopes, now, he said, of making his own way back to Norway and returning later to establish residence in this country. He already has applied for citizenship, he said.

TAX CASH HELD USED FOR NEW YORK QUIZ

B.O.P. Sponsored Inquiry on Roosevelt Regime Hit as "Political Fraud."

Albany, N. Y., March 13 (A.P.).—Democrats charged tonight that the Republican-controlled Legislature took $25,000 from Gov. Roosevelt's budget, which he had set aside for experimental work on spinal meningitis, and used it to finance the legislative investigation into Mr. Roosevelt's administration.

Irwin Steingut, leader of the Democratic forces in the Assembly, said the transfer had been made in the Republican fiscal committee treatment of the budget, the $25,000 being cut out of the budget and later appropriated for the investigation.

Steingut said the investigation was "an attempt to put Gov. Roosevelt on the spot." He declared the Republicans were "short of campaign funds" and would "use the taxpayers' money for this purpose in order to create political ammunition" by the investigation into the eighteen State departments under Mr. Roosevelt's jurisdiction.

Held Ordered by Capital.

"This investigation was ordered by official Washington," said the Democratic Assembly leader, "because the Republicans know that the loss of New York State to Herbert Hoover would cause his defeat fer reelection. No one realizes this better than Mr. Hoover himself.

"Like the New York City legislative investigation, this new inquiry will fall flat. Whether or not Samuel Seabury (counsel to the New York City inquiry body) will volunteer his services after receiving a fee of more than $100,000 is not known. Whether or not the Republicans would want Samuel Seabury for this new investigation, after his many defeats in court in behalf of the New York City inquiry, is also not known."

Republican spokesmen recently said they had not decided on appointing anyone as counsel for the State administration investigation.

Hopes Seabury Will Quit.

Senator John J. Dunnigan, Democratic chief in the Senate, expressed the hope that "now that Samuel Seabury has returned from his vacation and will soon get the $100,000, it is hoped that he will immediately resign and return either to the private practice of law or the promotion of his candidacy for either the Democratic presidential or vice presidential nomination."

"The day of reckoning," said Dunnigan, "will come for both Mr. Seabury and the Republican State party. There will also be a day of reckoning for the Hoover administration, which ordered this inquiry. That reckoning will come at the polls in November when Mr. Hoover will be repudiated as being somewhat to blame for the present business depression and the hit or miss Washington administration."

SKILL OF KIDNAPERS SEEN AS RAY OF HOPE

of the baby's parents to avoid impeding his return prevented those closest to them from questioning them about possible direct negotiations.

"The one thing in which the whole family is interested—the only thing —" she emphasized, "is getting the baby back. Every other consideration is ruled out. You ask about a Federal penalty for kidnaping? That, too, seems superfluous, for all that I and the rest of us are concentrating on is the return of the baby."

Of Anne Lindbergh's health Mrs. Greathouse spoke hopefully but not overconfidently. She commented:

"She always had a lot of grit. When I was there I was told she had been terribly brave. But you know the effect of a strain like this is cumulative."

A daughter of Mrs. Agnes M. Scandrett, sister of the late Ambassador Dwight Morrow, Mrs. Greathouse was reared in Pittsburgh, but spent many summer vacations with her cousins. She was educated at Smith College and the Washington College of Law, and became a public officer in 1925. She too has felt the strain of the kidnaping, for she saw the Lindbergh baby often, the last time during last June.

She is concerned also about her mother because Mrs. Scandrett has been at sea throughout the search. She sailed from Constantinople on a slow boat last February, undoubtedly received news of the calamity by radio, and will not reach home until March 20.

Though she has no definite plans, Mrs. Greathouse probably will return to New Jersey if the search is not successful soon.

"I practically found myself there," she said. "I simply had to go and offer whatever assistance I could give, and I shouldn't be surprised if I simply had to go again."

More Trade With U. S. Is Aim of Polish Group

Warsaw, Poland, March 13 (A.P.).—The Polish Export Institute today created a special organization committee for promotion of trade with the United States.

Representatives of the Polish Export Institute, the Chambers of Industry, Commerce and Trade, and the American-Polish Chamber of Commerce were named on the committee, which had before it a suggestion for the creation of a special commercial organization, a sort of agency, to establish contact with the American market.

Net Income of R. C. A. Is $768,900 for Year

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—Radio Corporation of America, whose capital stock is owned by more than 100,000 persons, reports the year 1931 gross income of $102,645,400 against $137,037,600 the year before and net income of $768,900 against $5,526,300 in 1930.

The company fell $3,441,980 short of earning its preferred dividends for 1931. The report states that depreciation charges in 1931 were $7,842,912, an increase of $1,210,000 over 1930. The company's report lists total assets of $117,061,000.

3 STATES' SUPPORT OF RITCHIE CLAIMED

Bruce SaysGovernor Swayed Michigan, South Carolina and Rhode Island.

(Associated Press.)

A statement expressing confidence that Gov. Albert C. Ritchie "may look for support" from Michigan, South Carolina and Rhode Island in his race for the Democratic presidential nomination was made here yesterday by Howard Bruce, Democratic national committeeman from Maryland.

Issued through the Ritchie-for-President committee of Maryland, the statement said the three States in which Ritchie recently visited and made campaign speeches had all "shown tremendous enthusiasm" for the Maryland governor.

"Reports from all parts of the United States," Bruce added, "demonstrate very plainly that the governor's frankness and candor in discussing public questions is striking a sympathetic chord not only among Democrats but among all thinking men who this year are looking for a man of ideas and convictions whom they may support."

Howard M. Rice, secretary of the France-for-President national committee, issued a statement asserting the advisers of President Hoover "do not dare allow his name to come before the rank and file of Republican voters for their approval."

The spokesman for Joseph I. France, of Maryland, a Republican presidential candidate, based his contention on the fact that the President did not enter the preference primary in Ohio, contenting himself with a contest for delegates alone.

TENNESSEE SUSPECT NOT KIDNAPED BABY

did not say how many his own son had cut. Dr. Mitchell found seven lower teeth and eight upper teeth, two of which had just come through, in the child held here.

Child Scared by Crowds.

The physician said the baby could talk if it were "not scared to death" by the crowds of people who gathered at the jail hoping for a glimpse of the youngster. The crush became to great the child was placed in a separate room, where a nurse and several women from Crossville gave it every attention.

"The baby is all dolled up and looking fine," the physician remarked, adding that if it was not the Lindbergh baby it was receiving "more care than any other baby in the United States except little Lindy."

Dr. Mitchell said the baby was perfectly normal. It expressed pleasure when given various toys, but bore no resemblance, he said, to the four persons with whom it was traveling. The couples said the crild was 16 months old, but Dr. Mitchell said it could be "20 months just as easily."

Parents Not Identified.

The four suspects were quoted as saying first that the baby was that of Mr. and Mrs. Young, who are somewhat elderly, but later that it was the child of their daughter and that they had taken care of it since it was a few days old. Young is 50 and Mrs. Young 53. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell are about 35.

Reports that efforts were being made to identify the child as the Lindbergh baby spread rapidly and by afternoon the crowds attracted here had grown so large Adjt. Gen. W. Caswell Boyd, of the Tennessee National Guard, dispatched several guardsmen from Cookeville and later motored from Nashville himself to take charge of the situation.

Telephone calls came from all over the South and East and there were two from Europe—London and Paris newspapers—for the first trans-Atlantic conversation in Crossville's history.

Westinghouse Net Loss Is $3,655,659

Unfilled Orders Almost Equal Previous Year, Report Shows.

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—In line with quieter business which affected the company, particularly keenly in the final quarter, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. suffered a loss of $3,655,659 in 1931 against a net income the year before of $11,881,705.

In their annual statement to stockholders which is now in the mails, A. W. Robertson, chairman, and F. A. Merrick, president, state that unfilled orders on hand at the end of the year totaled $40,024,390 against $40,208,181 the year before and $62,025,399, at the end of 1929. Large orders in connection with the Pennsylvania Railroad's electrification project largely account for the present substantial total.

The company's surplus was reduced to $79,050,324 from $95,373,912 the year before. Among the charges was one of $6,996,548 for payment of dividends not wholly earned, and a special charge of $5,671,379, which including provision for the depreciation of marketable securities to market value as of December 31, 1931. The company's balance sheet showed cash and marketable securities of $32,148,727 against $32,622,734 the year before; current assets of $100,522,486 against current liabilities of $7,368,011, a ratio of 13.6 to 1, and total assets of $222,819,778.

VENEZUELAN ENVOY OF BRITAIN TO QUIT

Requests Recall as Result of Growing Quarrel Due to Death of Dog.

Caracas, Venezuela, March 13 (A.P.).—The British Minister to Venezuela, W. E. O'Reilly, has offered to resign as a result of a dispute with the Venezuelan foreign office over the poisoning of his dog. It was understood today the British government would allow him to do so.

The accumulating facts of the difficulty to date appeared to be these:

Last October O'Reilly protested to the health director against the regulation requiring all dogs to have collars and muzzles while on the streets under penalty of official poisoning of any dog found uncollared and unmuzzled.

Found Dog Poisoned.

In December O'Reilly said he found his dog poisoned at the British legation. It was not muzzled, but wore a collar. The British Minister took the body to the health director's office and left a card with it. On the card O'Reilly said he wrote: "This is your work. Many thanks."

The authorities said, however, that O'Reilly had characterized the incident in opprobrious terms, and the minister promptly denied it.

The envoy said he heard no more until February of this year, when the Venezuelan foreign office informed him he was no longer persona grata, and asked him for an explanation.

Requests Recall.

The British envoy conferred with the Venezuelan foreign minister and, finding his explanations unacceptable, requested his government to recall him. He said he felt he no longer could be useful.

O'Reilly had not yet been recalled today, but it was understood his government would assent to his request.

The British Minister had been here five years and was considered most friendly with the Venezuelan government. He was personally well liked in diplomatic and social circles.

Grain Stocks Rise On Virginia Farms

Heavy Increase Is Laid to Light Feeding Needs and Big Crop.

Richmond, Va., March 13 (A.P.).—Grain stocks on Virginia farms totaled about 30,700,000 bushels as compared with 5,680,000 on March 1 last year, a Federal-State crop report said today. The usually large supply was attributed to the big crop of 1931 and unusually light feeding requirements.

Weather conditions were favorable for farm activity and satisfactory progress was reported throughout Virginia. Approximately 24,114,000 bushels, or about 56 per cent of the 1931 corn crop remained on the farms on March 1, while last year only 21 per cent remained on the farms on a corresponding date.

Wheat stock amounted to 4,643,000 bushels, 35 per cent of the 1931 production. Other stocks of grain on Virginia farms March 1 were as follows: Oats, 1,597,000, or 33 per cent of the 1931 production; rye, 251,000 bushels, 22 per cent of the 1931 production; barley, 142 bushels, 25 per cent of the 1931 crop. Both milk and egg production showed a slight upward trend.

Oil Rise Dwindles In Curb Trading

Prices Generally Remain Unchanged at End of Week.

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—Price trends were divergent in the curb market during the past week, with the general price level showing little change at the end of the period. Weakness of Electric Bond & Share, one of the most active issues in this market, was conspicuous late in the week, reflecting omission of preferred dividends by its subsidiary, American & Foreign Power, and some uncertainty over payments on other bond and share investments. The stock dropped to a new low in active selling. Some of the other utilities were under moderate pressure at times, notably American Gas & Electric and United Light A.

Utilities in the Insull group, however, reflected a lifting of the recent pressure in the quarter, as it was unofficially understood that banks were cooperating in plans toward extending or refunding loans to members of the group. Such issues as Commonwealth Edison and Public Service of Northern Illinois recovered several points.

Oils had periods of strength, but failed to make much real headway. The proposal of a general manufacturers sales tax, which, it was assumed, removed threat of additional levies on gasoline, helped for a time. Also the weekly petroleum statistics showed a marked reduction in the refinery operations, leading to the hope that excessive production was at least being checked. These shares were held back, however, by expectations that the several 1931 earnings statements yet to appear will be decidedly adverse.

Industrials and investment trusts were in the main narrowly changed. Aluminum Co. was under some pressure at times.

CHEERIO celebrates his fifth anniversary with his Easter audience this morning at 8:30, and KGO in his home, San Francisco, will go on the air special at 5:30 a. m., so that Californians can join the birthday party. A bright red letter "C" will be displayed in the windows of Eastern and Midwestern followers to mark the fifth anniversary of Cheerio's first broadcast from New York. This early morning program was heard for a year over KGO before Cheerio, who is a cousin of Eugene Field and a close friend of President Hoover, shifted his microphone activities to the WEAF studio.

Today 37 stations handle the Cheerio program. The custom of placing a red "C" in the window during Cheerio anniversary week was inaugurated last year when thousands of listeners reported that they had followed the suggestion as their part in the celebration.

A network transfer that will remove the Stebbins Boys, and the happenings of Bucksport Point, from WRC's wave length will be effective tonight. The program may be heard at 7:30 p. m. over WJZ and WBAL.

Singing "Valentine's Farewell" from Gounod's tragic opera, "Faust," Lawrence Tibbett will open the Voice of Firestone program over the WRC network at 8:30 p. m. Mr. Tibbett also will sing "The Cuban Love Song," "The Stein Song" from "The Prince of Pilsen" and "Danny Deever." William Merrigan Daly will direct the orchestra.

WALTER T. HOLT celebrated his 138th broadcast Friday night, which must be a local record. We never hear Prof. Holt without recalling the days when he directed the National Press Club Mandolin and Banjo Club. The club became so famous that one night it played for President Wilson.

This was at one of those informal Press Club affairs. When the musicians had finished, President Wilson turned to Dave Lawrence, playing the mandolin, formerly with the Princeton Mandolin Club, saying: "Fine, boys. Give us another!"

THE sponsors of the "Music That Satisfies" programs have announced the presentation of a new spring series. Ruth Etting will headline the series, starting today. Although Miss Etting has appeared often on the radio as a guest artist, her contract of thirteen weeks with Chesterfield is the first to present her on a program as a regular attraction, and she will sing on this hour exclusively during this time.

The three Boswell sisters will also be newcomers to the series, while Alex Gray, barytone, and Nat Shilkret and his orchestra, will be retained. Each of the three features will be presented for two 15-minute periods a week at 10:30 p. m., over WMAL. The Boswell Sisters appear Mondays and Thursdays, Alex Gray on Tuesdays and Fridays, and Miss Etting on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

THE annual gross revenue of the radio manufacturers, distributors and dealers last year, according to Electronics, was $309,000,000, and their total investment was $150,000,000. Listeners' sets now in use (18,500,000) were valued at $1,600,000,000.

The investment in program broadcasting stations was $25,000,000 and their annual gross revenue was figured at $50,000,000. Commercial (i. e. telegraph) stations represented a $25,000,000 investment. The total radio investment in the United States was calculated to be $1,800,000,000.

Rachel Morton, soprano, will be the guest artist on the Artists Service Musicale to be broadcast over WRC at 10:30 o'clock on Wednesday night. Miss Morton will be remembered by listeners as the leading soprano of the Dramatic Musicale series last fall.

The Smith College Glee Club will be heard in the seventh and last concert given under the auspices of the Alumnae Committee of Seven Colleges today (WMAL, 3:45 p. m.). Under the direction of Ivan T. Gorokhoff, the Glee Club will present a varied program of English madrigals, folk tunes and operatic selections.

IT is proposed that we start a Ben Bernie Club in Washington. Why not? Make Bernie the chairman of the board and John Smith(whose initials without the false whiskers are D. B. R., you can't fool us!) president. John to be provided with a pair of scales so that he can weigh the heavier and lighter programs.

Bernie will pin a bouquet on Kate Smith during his program tomorrow night (WMAL, 9 o'clock).

The unfortunate down-and-outers of New York's famous Bowery have been invited to attend a regular "githerin' " of Seth Parker's tonight. This strange "githerin' " will be broadcast over WRC, beginning at 10:30 p. m.

Phillips Lord, the Seth Parker of radio fame, has hired a basement at 215 Bowery and will entertain his guests with old songs and stories, together with the homespun philosophies for which he has become famous.

FOR the third consecutive year the three-hour Passion Service, commemorating the Crucifixion, to be conducted in the Washington Cathedral on Good Friday will be heard over a coast-to-coast network. According to radio authorities, the Good Friday services at Washington Cathedral have been the only religious services of such long duration so widely broadcast.

The Good Friday service will begin at noon and will continue until 3 p. m., Eastern standard time. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop of Washington, will deliver seven addresses during the service, which will consist of meditations on the seven last words of Christ on the Cross.

Beautiful musical elements of the service will include portions of Sir John Stainer's cantata, "The Crucifixion," sung by the famous Cathedral Choir, led by Edgar Priest.

The French lectures scheduled over WRC Wednesdays will hereafter be broadcast at 5:30 o'clock Tuesdays. The Thursday lectures will be broadcast as usual.

STARTING April 7, Rolfe's Orchestra, with 35 men, will be heard Thursday and Friday nights at 8:30. Beginning April 12, the Mills brothers, whose present commercial is coming to an end, will be heard Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7:15 p. m.

Rolfe's orchestral arrangements will be slightly different from anything he has yet attempted, and he will play dance rhythms, but in a more modified tempo than he previously featured.

Jane Interprets the MODE

Black crepe marocain afternoon dress with collar and cuffs of guipure and English embroidery, and some simply adorable sleeves for a more formal afternoon frock. (Courtesy of Ardanse, Paris.)

NEW YORK, March 13.—What is a divided skirt today? Well, if you must know, it's just . . . pants! The divided skirt has divided itself so completely that it has become two skirts, meaning two trousers, though they are so fashioned and so wide that they resemble a skirt almost all of the time when worn.

Paris offers divided skirts of this new type for summer frocks, and for sportswear of all kinds. As well as for travel. And these skirts, or trousers, end just below the knee, which is something else again from the skirt that used to end thusly, to the chagrin of every elegant woman!

Most of the new divided skirts are on a smart, hip-fitting yoke, and the trouser or divided effect is below this yoke. Many call them "short pyjamas" and others call them "trousers skirts!" When you read or hear about these you will know then that they mean divided skirts and are completely divided into trousers.

* * * *

The keynote of the day is nonchalant elegance. Casual, but so devastatingly elegant! Luxurious, expensive, extravagance that any of the Louis' and even the Russian courts would envy.

Believe it or don't believe it—but don't deny it until you have yourself seen the salons of the Haute Couture, the restaurants and "Boits" of Paris, the hotels of New York, and seen that not only the professionally elegant are thus, but the onlookers. Oh hard times, where are thou? Or maybe I mean, "thy sting."

* * * *

Every woman knows that the buttons she buys for her frock often cost more than all the material put together in the frock! I myself had this brought to my attention again when sister Dionne went button hunting for a particular shape of square or oblong button to go with the dress I sketched for you last week—the one I made from a mill-end remnant, remember? The material cost me exactly $2.75, and the eight buttons I wanted would have cost me 65 cents apiece! But they didn't because I just decided the dress wasn't worth it, and made buttons for it. If you would like to know how to make really good looking and even art buttons at home, just send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet which will tell you.

* * * *

The more I see of Ardanse models, the more certain I am that this Paris designer has a touch unique. Her frocks have just the right dramatic touch, without going even the teeniest bit too far. The black crepe marocain afternoon dress I sketch today, for instance. Aren't those cuffs and that collar too chic? They are of guipure and English embroidery, and I have sketched them in all of their extraordinary shape and charm. The dress is made further elegant with odd incrustations in the cut, which show the reverse side of the material.

And then, another Ardanses gesture * * * in the simply lovely sleeves she puts on another afternoon frock, this one more formal. On a blouse top of white georgine, sleeves that start at shoulders, as you can see in the sketch, end in a band of black Danabas crepe, and finish with balloon sleeves of Angora wool, embroidered in gold! The skirt of this frock was long, and of the black Danabas crepe. Lovely?

Au revoir!

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Damsel in Distress.

MY Dear Frances McDonald: I am writing you in the hope that, having expressed my feelings on paper, I may become somewhat reconciled, or at least resigned, to conditions which at the moment seem intolerable.

Whoever it was that originally made the statement that present-day man is rapidly degenerating certainly displayed a world of wisdom.

As an independent, self-respecting girl, making a decent living for myself, a burden on no one, interested in trying to grow as much as possible in the hope of some day being at least intelligent enough to be interesting, I have a burning question to ask: Can you please tell me why it is that apparently merely because a girl lives by herself in her own apartment (being some few thousand miles from home and having nary a relative in this city and also loving the independence of having my own home—if an apartment can be called such) men seem to feel perfectly free to themselves (having nothing to do, I suppose and belonging to no clubs, perhaps), and not only that, but presume to take the most uncalled for liberties. Is it that, being the self-styled "lords of creation," they feel their rightful privilege? If so, life has indeed become very complicated!

Really, if a home and marriage to one of these creatures is what woman is supposed to long for, I must confess myself to be utterly and shamelessly abnormal. And for fear of being accused of being a "soured old maid" (at 26), I will say that I married one of them several years ago and had the privilege of supporting him until I finally reached the conclusion that a husband was a luxury I could not afford, so casting aside any dreams of a home and family I left him, obtained a divorce and my own name, and am content to go blithely on by myself, asking nothing more of life than that I may continue to be able to make my own living and live in peace. WONDERING.

My dear, there have always been men of the type you so aptly describe. But formerly they were ostracized. Today they are received by girls like yourself, who ought to know better but do not.

These men are the discards of their sex. Other men do not accept them, but women do. Why? It would take uncanny wisdom, which we do not happen to possess, to answer that. Chiefly it has seemed to us to be due to the fact that woman is mawkish about the man who is a flop. Instead of pitying and forgetting him, she must take him in like the stray he is, feed him, and otherwise minister unto his helplessness and uselessness, while he, being invariably the type in whom female vanity replaces male self-respect, sees in her attentions not pity, but infatuation with his charms.

When self-sufficient young women learn to shoo from their doorsteps this tribe there will be an end to one of the newer problems of our day—the intelligent young woman saddled with the worthless man. There are thousands of these so-called men being supported by young wives who do not realize that such men are, to all intents and purposes, practically idiots—persons unable to provide for themselves.

You married and divorced one. But others feel "free to descend upon your household." How come? Such interesting phenomena never descended upon any household that has not indicated its accessibility. The matter of unwarranted behavior is to be expected. We repeat, these men are practical idiots, entirely irresponsible, utterly unfit for the associations women confer upon them. Refuse to receive any man who is so ill-bred as to impose himself uninvited, so conceited as to assume himself welcome under any and all circumstances. The fate of these instances of arrested development is in the hands of woman. That is why they now flourish as they do!

The Homemaker

By NANCY CAREY

A Visit to Spain for a Delicious Recipe.

TODAY, in contrast to our tendency toward dishes with French names and origin, we shall migrate to Spain for our main dish, suggesting meat balls after a Spanish fashion, served with a spicy tomato sauce. All of which reminds me of our Italian spaghetti recipe (which we have not suggested in ages) since Spain, you know, is rather a half-sister to Italy, as pertains to her cookery, at least. True, the Spaniards do not share the Italians' love of "pasta," but there is certainly a strong family resemblance between the two in their fondness for olive oil, the familiar tomato and their many fried dishes. But the Spanish sister is the more pert, so to speak, since she takes great stock in hot cinn, in paprika and cinnamon—while her Italian sister loves rice and her dishes abound in this cereal, although this be somewhat true for the senorita as well, which pollo con arroz, "a fat fowl with rice," will prove.

Now, our dinner suggestion for tomorrow's repast:

MENU FOR TUESDAY.

Spanish Meat Balls with Tomato Sauce
French-Fried Eggplant
Sunset Salad
Apple Charlotte
Coffee

Spanish Meat Balls.

2 cupfuls veal, cooked and ground
½ cupful salt pork, ground
1 cupful fine breadcrumbs
6 teaspoonfuls cheese
1 egg, beaten until light
1 teaspoonful salt
Dash of pepper
1-3 teaspoonful of marjoram or 1¾ tablespoonfuls chopped parsley.
Flour for dusting the balls.

Have the veal and pork ground together, then add the remaining ingredients. Combine the mixture thoroughly, form into egg-shaped balls and sprinkle with flour. Then put into tomato sauce and simmer for one hour.

Tomato Sauce.

Half-dozen tomatoes or one medium can of tomatoes
3 teaspoonfuls butter
1 onion, thinly sliced
Juice of one lemon
1 teaspoonful parsley, chopped
Salt and pepper to taste
2 cupfuls boiling water
1 egg yolk

Place butter in pan, add onion, thinly sliced, and brown slightly. Add the tomatoes, and when they start to break apart, add the boiling water and the seasoning. Then carefully place the meat balls in the sauce and simmer for one hour. Remove and set in a warm place. Then mix together the egg yolk, lemon juice and parsley, and add to the sauce. Simmer a moment, but do not boil. Boiling will curdle the egg. Pour over the meat balls and serve immediately.

French-Fried Eggplant.

1 egg plant
Eggs
Breadcrumbs

Peel eggplant, cut in ½-inch slices. Cut these into strips about 2 inches long. Parboil in salted water five minutes. Dry and dip in egg and crumbs. Fry in deep hot fat until a delicate brown. Drain on absorbent paper.

Sunset Salad.

1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 can medium-sized crushed pineapple
1½ cupfuls grated raw carrots

Dissolve gelatin in one cupful boiling water and add one cupful drained pineapple juice (add water if not enough juice to make a cupful of liquid). Set aside to harden, and, when slightly jellied, add the carrots and crushed pineapple. May be made in individual molds or one large mold. Serve on lettuce leaves with a garnish of mayonnaise.

Pollo Con Riso.

1 fat fowl
½ cupful olive oil
2 cloves garlic
½-inch piece of saffron
3 onions
4 red chilis
4 tomatoes
1 tablespoonful minced parsley
2 cupfuls rice
Salt and pepper

Soak the rice in three cupfuls water in which the saffron has been dissolved, for one hour. Brown the garlic in the hot oil and add the chicken, cut in pieces for serving. Turn constantly for about ten minutes. Peel the onions and tomatoes and chop fine with the parsley and chilis. Add to the chicken and cook stirring constantly ten minutes longer. Season with one teaspoonful salt and one-quarter teaspoonful pepper. Drain rice and place in casserole with just enough saffron water to cover. Boil up once and then let it simmer until rice is tender, stirring constantly. Serve chicken on a hot platter surrounded with the rice.

THE WEIGHT GUIDE.

For individual assistance, write to Nancy Carey, sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope and give age, weight, height and habits of life.

Answers to Readers.

Dear Miss Carey—I, too, am in the reducing class and have lost quite a bit of weight. But now I don't seem to be able to lose any more, although I'm not gaining, either. I am 36 years old, 5 feet 4 inches tall and weigh 176 pounds. I did weigh 200. I work very hard; get up at 5:30 every morning, have two men in my family and twelve rooms to keep going. Do all our cooking, washing and ironing, drive the car, raise chickens, besides doing dozens of other things. In the summer I have a large vegetable garden and some flowers. I try to watch my diet, using skim milk, wholewheat bread, &c. Can you help me? MRS. R.

You should weigh about 135 pounds, Mrs. R., and should have no trouble in reducing to this extent, now that you have already lost so much weight. If the first 100 years are the hardest, the first 25 pounds are also worst of all. Once the pounds really begin to disappear the battle is half won, for the stage has then been reached when the demand exceeds the supply, and energy needs must be met by calling upon your own stored-up fat. Just so long as a balance betwen the two is maintained there will be no loss of weight, you see.

I wonder how any one as active as yourself could possibly remain overweight. It must be that, even though you are watchful where the better known facts of reducing are concerned, like using wholewheat bread and skimmed milk, for instance, it will be necessary for you to be even more careful and watchful in order to accomplish noticeable results. It would be wise at first for you to outline your meals for each day listing the calories and watching the total in order to make sure that you keep well within your allowance. Unless this is done, it is easy to take a few hundred calories more than one should without actually realizing it and in that way quite defeat your best efforts. After a while, it may not be necessary to exert such great care and precision—your appetite will be under control and your knowledge of calories such that you will almost automatically eat the right amounts and kinds of food.

Let me hear from you soon—with an addressed and stamped envelope, please.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

CODFISH CAKES.

PERSONS buying codfish cakes had better eat them on the premises where they are cooked, and not too long thereafter. These cakes are made of codfish and white potatoes, mashed and mixed and then cooked. Mixtures of meats of different sorts and potatoes, flour, or meal cooked together, make very palatable and highly nutritious dishes, and are wholesome. As a rule they taste very good when cold and they are rather readily transported. There is much to be said in favor of this group of dishes, and they merit a wider use than they have. In order to get it they must have a fair break. They can not withstand the reputation of having caused any disease.

Dr. Ellis Kellert reports a small outbreak of food poisoning due to codfish cakes. A food dealer made some codfish cakes one hot June morning. He put them in an open tray on an open counter in his store. Several people bought them in the forenoon and served them at noon. By night those who had eaten them developed diarrhea, vomiting, cramps, and prostration. In all probability these was some fever and general aching. These symptoms persisted for several days and then cleared up. Every poisoned person recovered without after-effects.

These symptoms are typical of a food poisoning due to some bacterial contamination. The time of onset was about right. The symptoms indicated that there was something in the digestive tract that was quite irritating. Other symptoms showed a mild degree of general poisoning. Fortunately, in this type of poisoning the symptoms come on promptly. They give warning that something is wrong, and the vomiting and diarrhea has the effect of ridding the system of the poison.

Dr. Kellert secured some of the cakes, made cultures of them, and got a bacillus which is capable of producing just the kind of food poisoning present in these cases.

With a few precautions this accident could have been avoided. In the first place, the temptation is strong not to heat codfish cakes very long or very thoroughly. They are made of ingredients that have been cooked previously or pretty well preserved otherwise. It would be safer to give them a longer cooking, even though it be at low temperature, in order to kill bacteria, and then finish with the usual browning.

The browning-cooking processes have their place, but they are not satisfactory as germ-killing procedures because the heat does not penetrate well. In the second place, the cooked foods should not have been exposed unwrapped in an open tray. Had these cakes had a more thorough cooking and had they then been individually wrapped, they probably would have been safe and wholesome.

LOSS OF MEMORY.

F. P. F. writes: A car caught the front end of my car when I was traveling about 40 miles an hour, perhaps more, and threw it out of control and headed it for the bank. I straightened the car. I did not think I had lost consciousness for a moment, but the next thing I knew the car was lying on its right side in the bottom of a ditch several feet deep, on the left side of the highway. The top of the left side was badly crushed, the top of the right side only slightly damaged, showing that the car tipped and struck against the ditch bank with its left side and then rolled back on to its right side.

There was a dent in my forehead, the seat in which I was sitting was broken, and the steering wheel was bent, showing that I had lurched against the steering wheel and then back against the seat. There was a constriction of my chest that made it difficult for me to draw a long breath. There was no pain in connection with it and in the course of a few days it wore off entirely. I did not attach any importance to the dent in my forehead. It bled a little but there was no pain. It has been a mystery to me that all this could have happened without my remembering a thing about it. Your article, "The Memory of Concussion," has led me to wonder if the blow which caused the dent in my forehead could possibly have been responsible for loss of memory.

It would seem as though I must have been conscious when my car veered to the left after I had it headed straight, and that there was nothing to cause me to lose consciousness up to the time the car tipped and struck the bank, at which time I probably lurched forward and struck my forehead. But I had not the slightest recollection.

It may not have been more than a second or less after I had the car straight until it was lying on its side in the ditch. I thought that I could not think fast enough to keep up. That there was any concussion of the brain, with a retroactive effect on my memory, is an explanation that I never dreamed of, and I am wondering if that is what happened. I suppose if I lost consciousness at all I may have been unconscious for several seconds or possibly minutes.

REPLY.

Your experience is an excellent illustration of what I wrote about. The experiences preceding the blow on your head were traveling too fast for your perceiving and recording apparatus.

Indoor—Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

PLANNING YOUR GARDEN WORK.

THIS is the time to go over your garden and note down the things that must be done between now and April 1, and also to line up the work that must be done in April, for if we depend on the April showers alone we may find that we have few flowers in May.

First you must not forget to prepare your flats, for seed of such plants as dusty miller, verbena, lobelia and salvia should always be started in the house. Of course, where there is an unlimited pocketbook you can depend on purchasing plants which have been started in the greenhouse, but this procedure makes large inroads into the garden budget.

This is the time to cut dead wood from raspberries or blackberries. This should be done every year and the bushes should be cut back every other year. March is also the month to set out fruit trees. Should you have a vegetable patch, spade it as soon as possible in order to have it ready for young plants of cabbage or eggplant.

If you have a hot bed, make use of it to sow some seeds of half-hardy annuals such as phlox drummondi, snapdragon or ageratum. You may sow these seeds in the open at this time if the ground is workable. This, of course, depends on the season.

After the middle of March is the time to top-dress your lawn with bonemeal and do any reseeding that may be necessary. You may now with safety prune your honeysuckle and trumpet vines. Remove all dead wood and some of its old wood that is not dead and then tie the branches to their supports as you want them to grow.

March is the month when you must begin to uncover, or at least loosen, the covering from your spring-flowering bulbs; also from your perennials, and you may also begin to remove the covering from evergreens. This season we have had so much really warm weather that it seems unlikely that we will have any harmful late frosts, but, of course, we can never be certain.

If you have a sun porch you should begin to divide and pot your cannas, tuberoses, begonias and caladiums.

UNDERGROUND BANK ROBBERS THWARTED

Elude Heavily Armed Police Squads in Los Angeles Storm Drains.

Los Angeles, March 13 (A.P.).—A band of bank robbers detected in an underground attempt to drill into a branch of the Security First National Bank here shortly after midnight today eluded squads of police and escaped through a maze of storm drains.

Called to the scene by reports that pounding had been heard beneath the paving, officers stood guard at manholes while others penetrated the drains with machine guns and tear gas bombs. Ambulances and firemen stood ready about the district.

The searchers found a tunnel leading from a drain to the vault, a 4-inch hole drilled in the concrete of the bank's foundation, a large quantity of freshly removed earth, a spade and indications that lunches had been eaten at the scene of operations. Water splashed high on the walls of adjoining 6-foot drains showed the course of hurried flight for a short distance.

The police reported fingerprints were obtained.

A band of bank burglars directed by engineering skill and well equipped with special tools had been sought here since the Belvedere Gardens branch of the Security First National Bank was entered by a tunnel and robbed of $19,000 during the week-end of last December 22. On January 26 a branch of the Bank of America was robbed of $15,000 by similar means.

2 Virginia Women Hurt In Fairfax Accidents

Mrs. Marvin Sanders and Mrs. Mark Turner, of Forestville, Va., were badly injured in an automobile accident at Baileys Cross Roads on Saturday. The two women were in an automobile driven by Mrs. Turner's son, Edwin, on their way to Alexandria to assist in operating the County Home Demonstration Clubs' market.

At the intersection of the Alexandria-Leesburg pike and the Columbia pike their car was in a collision with a car driven by Walter Bigbars, of Duke street extended, Alexandria. The Turner car was overturned and pies and home-made cooked foodstuffs were scattered over the road. The injured women were taken to Alexandria for treatment.

Second Berg Kidnaper Draws 25-Year Term

St. Louis, March 13 (A.P.).—The second man in the Alexander Berg kidnaping case was convicted today when a circuit court jury returned a verdict of guilty against Edward Barcume, former convict, and fixed punishment at 25 years in the penitentiary. The State had asked the death penalty.

Two convictions, one plea of guilty and one mistrial have resulted since the arrest of five men for the abduction last November of the wealthy St. Louis fur dealer, who was held prisoner four days in a flat before being released after a promise of $50,000 ransom, which was never paid.

U.S. MART NOT UPSET BY KREUGER'S DEATH

Effects on Wall Street Are Viewed as Unimportant; Isues Supported.

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—Wall street leaders today viewed the situation arising from the death of Ivar Kreuger as of little direct bearing upon financial affairs in the United States.

Bankers acknowledged that the psychological effect on world financial centers was undoubtedly adverse, but it was believed that neither Kreuger nor the Kreuger companies had outstanding bank loans in the United States.

Offices of Lee, Higginson & Co., New York banking representatives of Kreuger and Toll Co., were kept open during the day, while some of the partners met to receive any further advices from Stockholm.

Officials of the New York Stock Exchange did not feel that the situation in the Kreuger issues listed here called for any action on the part of the governors of the exchange, at least before the opening of European markets tomorrow. No meeting of exchange governors was called, and so far as could be learned, there were no gatherings of financial leaders, save for the gatherings of some of the Lee, Higginson partners.

Bankers who discussed the matter informally pointed out that the Kreuger issues had never been an important factor in the New York Stock Exchange. Despite the huge turnover in the American certificates of Kreuger & Toll on Saturday, the remainder of the list closed with numerous small gains. The Kreuger issues, it was felt, have already been drastically deflated. Kreuger & Toll's close on Saturday, at $5 a share, off 37 cents, was regarded as reflecting supporting orders, and some bankers pointed out that support might now be withdrawn.

Curley Club Retreat Will Start Saturday

About 50 young ladies, members of the Curley Club, will make the week-end retreat over Palm Sunday at the Retreat House, Harewood road, Brookland, D. C. The retreatants will gather at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the parlors of the Retreat House, where a reception will be held previous to the first conference.

The retreat, which will be given by a Marist Father, will close with the Papal benediction Sunday evening. Miss Mary L. McGee, founder of the Curley Club, is chairman of the arrangements committee.

Policeman Is Battered As Man Resists Arrest

Private N. T. Imlay, Second Precinct policeman, lost all the buttons off his uniform tunic and received several blows in the face before finally subduing Stephen J. Thigpin, 24, colored, of 1426 S street northwest, whom he was arresting on a disorderly conduct charge.

Thigpin was struck several times with the policeman's baton during the struggle. Later he was treated for lacerations of the scalp at Freedmen's Hospital and booked on charges of assault and disorderly conduct.

SHIP'S 'SAVED CREW RETURNS TO BOSTON

First Engineer Paints Vivid Picture of Three Nights Spent in Storm.

Boston, March 13 (A.P.).—The crew of the collier H. F. De Bardeleben, who were rescued from their stricken craft at sea, came into Boston Harbor aboard a tug today, reticent, but their seamed faces bearing the saga of three harried nights on a storm-whipped ocean.

Roald Anderson, of Baltimore, first engineer, could not, however, refrain from painting a few vivid flashes of the three fiercest nights he has ever known. Shivering from the March winds, his face bearing a week's growth of beard, he told how the crew had stayed at their posts as their rudderless craft plunged on through the angry billows, shipping water and every minute threatening to roll under.

"That last night was very, very bad," he said. "I though sure she was going under every next minute. I'm glad that British boat was there to take us off when it did."

Saw Boat Slide Under

After three nights, calm came to allow the crew to launch lifeboats and reach their rescuer, British freighter, the Laganbank. The liner Adiatic also had stood by at the call of distress.

As the Laganbank sailed off the crew of the De Bardeleben stood on the deck and watched the craft that had been their home, pitch at the caprice of the storm. Then, they saw it rise, bow up, and slide under.

"We had to keep those engines running," Anderson said. "You see those engines kept the boat up. We were glad to see those other boats staying with us, too. We kept those pumps going all the time because the boat was leaking badly, especially that last night."

Anderson would say no more.

De Bardeleben Silent.

Bailey De Bardeleben, son of the owner of the collier and third mate of the craft, was there, but said he was under orders from the captain and could say nothing.

Capt. C. T. Kight was also reluctant to talk. "We've got to be at a hearing tomorrow," he said.

The rescue ship will be fumigated tomorrow before she can enter this port, to which she was headed from Port Said when she was summoned to the aid of the collier. The rescue was made about 600 miles east of New York.

2 Ill Anthropoids At Zoo Are Better

Gorilla and Chimpanzee Improve as Colds Are Treated.

O'Kero, the gorilla, and Teddy, the chimpanzee, the two anthropoids at the zoo that were suffering from heavy colds, appeared much better yesterday.

The lion house, where they are caged, was opened to the public last week after N'Gi died, and yesterday a throng was continually in front of their cage. They are still in the same cage, but have been separated by a wooden partition, which neither one seems to like.

It was feared by doctors and attendants that O'Kero and Teddy had caught pneumonia from N'Gi, but so far no symptoms of that have developed.

MRS. J. M. BOLLING DEAD.

Visitor From Huntsville, Ala., Expires After Brief Illness.

Mrs. John M. Bolling, of Huntsville, Ala., who had been spending the winter in Washington, died here yesterday in her eighty-first year after an illness of less than a week, culminating in an attack of double pneumonia.

Mrs. Bolling is survived by two brothers, Judge R. W. Walker, of Huntsville, and Percy H. Walker, of Washington.

The funeral will be held in Huntsville at noon tomorrow.

DEBTS MORATORIUM IS VOTED BECAUSE OF KREUGER SUICIDE

ger's heirs and to four of his associates, including Deputy Director Littorin.

The Stockholm Stock Exchange was ordered closed last night until further notice. It was also announced a committee of exchange members would meet on Tuesday to further consider the financial situation.

Meanwhile leaders of Swedish finance and industry braced themselves to face any developments that may arise from the suicide of this world-known financier.

At the same time it was generally insisted that if the country will but keep its head, the consequences of Kreuger's tragic death need not be anything like as serious as semed possible yesterday when the news came as a staggering shock to the naton.

Banks Expected to Function.

It was confidently asserted last night that all banks would be open tomorrow.

At a meeting called yesterday by Premier Ekman, the chairman of the bank council, Maf Jochnik, was reported to have expressed the view that there would not be any immediate difficulties within the Kreuger organization, but that it would be possble to test ther liquidity at the end of April.

(New York dispatches Saturday said that Kreuger had recently failed to obtain financial assistance needed to meet maturing obligations in April, but this was denied by Lee Higginson & Co., a New York concern which dealt in his match stocks.)

Reports current here said that Kreuger had insured himself in 1925 for a big sum—probably between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000.

The policy was said to have been taken out with a large Swedish company. As for suilide, Swedish companies usually follow the rule that insurance is paid to beneficiaries if more than three years have elapsed after a policy is taken out. Kreuger's family is said to be his beneficiary.

International Bank to Wait.

Basil, Switzerland, March 13 (A.P.). Governors of central European banks here for the Bank for International Settlements board meeting met today to discuss possible financial repercussions from the death of Ivar Kreuger, the Swedish match monopolist.

They decided to await events before going deeply into the matter.

This nerve center of world banking appeared greatly concerned over Kreuger's suicide in Paris yesterday, but apparently no other action was taken, other than the central European bankers' meeting.

London, March 13 (A.P.).—A telegram from Kreuger & Toll Company of Sweden was published here tonight ascribing the daeth of Ivar Kreuger, the financier, to "a superhuman burden of work," and explaining the company's position.

It said:

"We today publish the following statements:

"The death of Ivar Kreuger came as an unexpected blow to the whole of Sweden, causing deep affliction among his friends and collaborators.

Nervous Breakdown Blamed.

"It must be ascribed to his superhuman burden of work, which caused a nervous breakdown about a month ago in New York. All of M. Kreuger's collaborators are now hard at work to obtain a clear view of the concern's actual position.

"The Swedish government Saturday night called the press into a meeting, informing them that the government had drawn a legislative bill to be submitted to the Riksdag before Monday morning, containing a law entitling the government to grant a debtor respite in payment of debt for a certain time up to one month if the general interest makes such a step necessary.

"It is officially understood that this law is intended to protect the Kreuger concerns in case of panic caused by his death, but that this law is to be regarded as a preventative measure and might not have to be applied.

"The firm hope was expressed that the public and the press will view the situation calmly and without undue alarm. The Swedish government's banking inspector announces that so far as now can be seen M. Kreuger's death can bring no serious consequences to Swedish banking."

Meanwhile, is was understood on high authority here that no British banks are involved or will be affected by the death of the financier.

This authority said that any losses which might follow the tragedy would be confined in this country to British holders of shares in the companies involved.

Upward of 25,000 persons passed the bier of the Bishop Thomas J. Shahan, rector emeritus of the Catholic University, yesterday at the main crypt of the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, where his body is lying in state.

The couple had a sister of the bride, the Countess Torrellano, as attendant. The honeymoon will be spent in Spain.

Stone Is Appointed To Institute Board

Justice Will Help Direct International Affairs Study at Columbia.

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—Appointment of Harlan F. Stone, associate justice of the United States Supreme Court to the administrative board of the new Institute of International Affairs at Columbia University was announced today.

Justice Stone, who will serve for three years, was dean of the Columbia Law School from 1910 to 1924, resigning shortly before he was named Attorney General by President Coolidge. Justice Stone was graduated from the school in 1898.

Provision for the establishment of the institute was made by the will of the late Judge Edwin B. Parker, of Washington, D. C., who died in 1929. The supervising trustees appointed by Judge Parker, among whom was Justice Stone, decided in 1931 to locate the institute at Columbia. The amount available for the maintenance of the undertaking will eventually be about $2,000,000.

4 Firemen Felled At Church Blaze

Homestead, Pa., Edifice Is Razed; Falling Spire Perils Workers.

Pittsburgh, March 13 (A.P.).—The twin-spired church of St. Mary Magdalene in Homestead was destroyed by fire today. Four firemen were overcome.

The blaze was so stubborn that firemen were unable to make any progress. Shortly after 7 p. m., as thousands jammed nearby streets, one steeple fell, tearing down electric fires and endangering firemen. As the wires struck water and ice in the street, they sent showers of sparks high into the air, causing a near panic among spectators.

After the steeple toppled, the flaming debris buried hose lines and made the street a seething furnace. Firemen worked frantically to connect new lines of hose to replace those covered by blazing wreckage. Thirteen fire companies from Pittsburgh, Homestead and nearby suburbs were called to the scene.

Grew and Wife Leave Istanbul for Capital

Istanbul, Turkey March 13 (A.P.). Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, recently appointed American envoy to Japan, and Mrs. Grew left for Washington today. A large crowd of the American colony folk and Diplomatic Corps representatives waved them farewell. The lieutenant governor of Istanbul presented Mrs. Grew with a bouquet on behalf of the city government.

Mr. Grew, a veteran in Oriental affairs, was appointed Ambassador to Tokyo on February 9, to succeed W. Cameron Foorbes, who had signified last year that he wished to retire from the post.

Convict Is Killed After Jail Break

Two Others Surrender in New Jersey; Keeper Badly Beaten.

Kingston, N. J., March 13.—Samuel Klein, a convict, was shot to death after he had participated in a temporarily successful jail delivery today. Ludlow Post, a keeper, was in the hospital tonight, badly injured by prisoners who plotted the break.

The plan was initiated by Convicts Samuel O'Rourke and Dixon Ufer, both of whom are 19 years old, according to police. The youths sawed their way out of their cells, and, armed with iron bars taken from their beds, attacked Keeper Post as he was opening the gates for the breakfast call. The two convicts then released Klein, and walked out of the jail.

At Bloomington, 4 miles away, they were sighted by a police car. O'Rourke and Dixon surrendered. Klein tried to escape and was killed by Deputy Sheriffs Charles McCullough and John Stought.

MacDonald Is Warned Not to Strain His Sight

London, March 13 (A.P.).—W. S. Duke-Elder, an oculist, today examined Premier Ramsay MacDonald and found the condition of his left eye "very satisfactory." An operation was performed to correct trachoma, a diminution of the vision, recently.

The oculist warned the prime minister, however, that if the satisfactory condition is to be maintained he must be more careful not to strain his sight as he had in the past.

A RATIONAL GERMANY.

The assured reelection of President Hindenburg is cause for felicitation, not only to Germany, but to the world. It is one more gratifying proof that the forces of disintegration, repudiation and reaction, even in one of the centers of greatest activity, are not as strong as their boasts have made them seem. The more conservative, sound opinion of Germany still dominates, and the result of yesterday's contest offers hope and opportunity for the constructive elements of the country to continue their work of restoring economic and financial stability.

The German electoral system differs from that of the United States in that in a first electoral contest, such as that held yesterday, a majority of all votes cast is necessary to a choice. If no candidate has received a majority, a second election will be held on April 10, at which a plurality vote is sufficient to elect. Even if complete returns show that President Hindenburg has not received a majority his heavy plurality lead indicates that there would be no doubt of the result at a second election next month.

With this demonstration that German sentiment for honesty and support of established principles of government still dominates the majority, with England showing renewed strength and courage in the fight against adverse conditions, the countries of distracted Europe will all view the future with more optimism. Furthermore the favorable effect of the German election will not be lacking on this side of the Atlantic. It is not difficult to visualize how vastly different the situation might have been today if Herr Hitler had been elected to the executive leadership of the Reich.

Hitlerism is not so much the embodiment of a constructive national policy as it is an emotional expression of resentment against what the fiery young leader and doubtless many sincere followers consider the interminable humiliation of war debts and reparations imposed by other nations. Their campaigns against further payments, against class distinctions and the wealthier ranks of society, in the trying times of recent years, naturally attracted many followers among the unemployed, discontented and militaristic elements.

A few months ago notable gains by the Nazis in elections for the Reichstag roused fears that they might sweep the country, but when the Bruening government was later supported by repeated votes of confidence it was shown that the Hitler gains had not been taken from the government strength. The general election has now demonstrated that also among the German people as a whole, President Hindenburg and his government are stronger than the opposition of the Fascists and the Communists.

All nations can congratulate themselves today that reason and common sense have triumphed in Germany, and that, instead of confronting the demoralizing uncertainty of radicalism and repudiation that would quickly undo all the constructive work that has been accomplished during the past year, sane efforts toward recovery will be continued by German leaders best qualified to accomplish practical results. Instead of a suspension of all effort while waiting to see whether a German firebrand would start a new European conflagration, the world at large can go on today with its reconstruction efforts.

ALIENS KEPT OUT.

One of the plus values of the present situation of the United States is that there is now only nominally any such thing as immigration. Authorities estimate that there has been a 94 per cent decline in the arrival of aliens.

The policy of refusing entry to a person "likely to become a public charge"—a policy dictated by the immigration statutes—is responsible for the heavy reductions, and American workingmen who imagine that they have a grievance against the administration of President Hoover would do well to remember this fact.

Had the gates remained open, there would have been the usual flood of men and women from the less fortunate areas of the globe. Normally, perhaps, the United States might have accommodated them. But in a time of economic readjustment it is imperative that they should not come.

There was a period when the country did not produce its own quota of humanity fast enough to accomplish the rapid development of the land. Now that that period is over, it is neither to the national advantage nor to the advantage of immigrants themselves to open the gates.

Immigration made America, but uncontrolled immigration easily might unmake it. The country needs to be re-Americanized. This goal can be won more quickly and economically by protecting and assimilating the human stock already here than by admitting more aliens, even if they be of high quality.

SALES TAX EXAGGERATION.

One representative, speaking in opposition to the sales levy, denounced it on the ground that the tax of 2¼ per cent would entail the payment of $22.50 by a family that expended $1,000 for necessities. This should not be considered a fair sample of congressional logic and arithmetic, since it is an exaggeration of at least 350 per cent. To exact such a tax from the poor man's purchases would necessitate the deduction of the tax rate from every dollar spent. This, of course, will not occur; nor will the tax be exacted upon his retail purchases. It is a manufacturers' tax.

The tax designed to yield approximately $600,000,000 will be levied, at the rate of 2¼ per cent, on about $26,000,000,000 of manufactures. By the time these products reach the retailer, after adding the tax paid by the manufacturer, transportation charges to the wholesaler, and his additions for handling and profit, and the addition of handling and profit by the retailer, the original manufacturer's cost, on which the tax was assessed, is readily doubled. The rate of tax on consumer valuation is, therefore, cut in half.

Since competition in many lines will result in the tax being absorbed by the manufacturers, a tax upon retail sales of double value, if levied to raise the same amount as that contemplated from the manufacturers' tax, would not exceed 1 per cent. Furthermore, a family spending $1,000 would not spend more than half of it for taxable articles. Therefore, instead of the manufacturers' tax exacting 2¼ per cent upon $1,000, it would exact only 1 per cent from $500, or $5. The probabilities are that an even larger proportion of the tax would be absorbed by the producers of goods, and that the bulk of it will never reach the retail purchaser. In any event a yearly contribution of $5 from an income that is not required to pay any form of income tax is not an excessive burden, in times when all citizens should contribute to the support of government according to their means.

IMPROVING THE MOVIES.

At last the motion picture industry is making a comprehensive effort to determine what type of entertainment the public wants. A poll of opinion is being conducted among leaders in all strata of American life under direction of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. Every city and town will be covered by the vote.

Purposes of the poll are to widen the scope of screen entertainment; to indicate to scenario writers what themes are preferred by the public, and to clear up moot questions as to the appeal of movie entertainment among the various classes. The producers want to know, for example, how the tastes on Broadway differ from those on Main street. Do the people want to see realism or romance, comedy or tragedy? From the response to these questions the producers hope to shape their programs to the desires of the movie-going public and to attract classes that do not now patronize the screen.

The purpose behind this preference poll is commendable, but its effectiveness is open to question. No individual can tell by checking his preference for classical drama, romance, tragedy, melodrama, crime exposure, political intrigue, social or sex problems whether he will enjoy a film produced under that heading. One who has an abstract liking for detective mystery may find the movies in that field impossible. At best the result of the poll will be a very inexact guide.

The quality of a talking film often depends upon the manner of handling it. For the most part producers insist upon treating American audiences as if they were mentally and emotionally adolescent, if not defective. Will H. Hays has just recently discovered that pictures of a dramatic and intellectual caliber heretofore considered above the heads of the average audience are being received with enthusiastic approval by the regular motion picture audiences. It is difficult to believe that the motion picture theaters would lose any patronage by substituting a higher quality of art and drama for much of the rubbish that is shown on the screen.

COMPLICATIONS IN MANCHURIA.

Identical agreement with the announced policy of the United States by the nations of the league, which in effect notifies Japan that agreements or advantages secured through military pressure will not be recognized, consolidates world opinion with remarkable unanimity in this case. The action relieves the league of the embarrassing alternative which confronted it of invoking the warlike measures plainly indicated in its covenant.

While blockades and boycotts are avoided by adopting a course that refuses to recognize the right of an aggressor to enjoy the fruits of aggression, perplexing questions lie ahead in connection with the position of Japan in China. Japan is bending every effort to have Manchuria considered a closed incident. Correspondents both in China and Geneva have given warning that Japan may offer to share any advantages that might be secured through the present situation at Shanghai, in exchange for support of Japan's occupation of Manchuria, both through direct control and through the puppet government that has been set up. By the time the league committee or individual governments are called upon to determine the status of Japan in Manchuria the question will present many difficult angles.

It may be difficult to prove, no matter how thoroughly its real character might be believed, that the regime of Pu-Yi is entirely a creature of the Japanese. Meanwhile, however, there is no question of the rapid extension of Japanese influence and industrial control throughout the Manchurian provinces. Japan is promptly extending railway connection to facilitate her trade and to extend settlements of Japanese colonists.

The Japanese press suppresses news of railway construction in Manchuria, but the more direct connection with Korea is under way, and the offices of the South Manchuria line are being moved from Dairen to a more central location at Mukden. Financial institutions, power plants and many commercial lines are being rapidly absorbed by Japanese interests. The Oriental Development Co., a Japanese concern which had invested 250,000,000 yen in Manchuria in recent years, is reported to have realized a profit of 25,000,000 yen already through the change in administration.

Now that Japanese colonists will be able to secure titles to lands in Manchuria, plans are being made for sending hundreds of thousands of farmers from Japan. Japanese can not compete with hand labor by Chinese, but on the broad virgin plains of Manchuria, where mechanized farming can be introduced, a great opportunity is seen for development. There is no doubt that under Japanese control, either direct or indirect, Manchuria, relieved of banditry and oppressive war lords, will prosper as it never did under Chinese rule. The longer a settlement of the situation is delayed the more the material improvement will complicate the question of political rights. The Manchurian problem is one that will be with the world for a long time.

IVAR KREUGER.

The suicide of Ivar Kreuger casts a melodramatic light upon the personal side of world finance. The stubborn courage with which most of the constructive geniuses of the world are battling against adverse conditions is emphasized when one of their group collapses and takes his life. Ivar Kreuger was the main trunk of a financial and industrial tree whose roots and branches extended into many countries. The markets today may demonstrate whether the tree is to survive, notwithstanding the fall of its central support, or whether it and its roots and branches are to perish. The move for a moratorium on the part of the Swedish government gives a hint of the ramified nature of Ivar Kreuger's activities.

Many Americans have money invested in the enterprises with which Kreuger was identified. Until the depression occurred, and even afterward, it appeared that the syndicates organized by Kreuger and his associates were solidly built and capable of withstanding any storm. His organization had lent financial support to many governments, and drew profits from them in the form of the match monopoly, telephone franchises, banks, industrial concerns and shipping interests. If his suicide is an indication that he had reached the end of his resources the next development may be a series of moratoriums in countries whose finances are affected. The suspension of payments on certain bond issues may follow.

Nothing stirs up the economy fever in Congress so quickly as the discovery that some fellow is drawing down a bigger salary than a congressman.

Uncle Sam will be lucky if he doesn't find a lot of claims for damages instead of checks when he opens his income tax returns on Wednesday morning.

The average citizen rests fairly easy under the heinous charge of hoarding vast wealth.

A PROBLEM OF BOYCOTTING

From the New York Herald Tribune.

Some practical light upon the question of how an official boycott against Japan would really work is supplied by a memorandum of the Institute of Pacific Relations summarizing the trade statistics involved. The question itself is interesting, not because any likelihood remains that such a boycott will be attempted, but as a theoretical test of this new weapon, in which pacifist opinion has been inclined to put so much faith. It is a weapon clearly double-edged. Suppose that the United States should enforce against Japan the complete system of nonintercourse outlined in Article XVI of the Covenant. The first result would be to destroy a market which last year took 40 per cent of our total exports of raw cotton, or 12 per cent of our total cotton production. The direct loss would come to about $80,000,000, while the indirect loss, due to throwing an extra 1,700,000 bales upon the remaining world markets, would certainly be severe. At the same time 85 per cent of our raw silk imports would be cut off; most of the 300,000 American silk workers would probably be thrown out of employment and all would suffer. Finally, American investors would lose the $435,500,000 they have put into Japan.

Though a costly business, we could doubtless stand the strain; but would it achieve anything? It would not, of course, unless the embargo were universally enforced by all the other powers; and even then, though Japan would suffer a severe economic dislocation, it is doubtful whether the pressure would be enough to break a national will. Japan imports only 4 to 7 per cent of her food. Her industrial system depends very largely on foreign trade; but only 10 per cent of the population is supported by factory labor. "A credit embargo," says the institute memorandum, "is of doubtful effectiveness against any first-class power," and would, of course, be meaningless were there a complete cessation of foreign trade.

The psychological consequence of an embargo would be a resort by the victim to military war. Curiously enough, there is reason for supposing that war might be the best solution for the economic difficulties the embargo would produce. Munitions making would replace the lost export trade; the war enthusiasm would meet the strains of the economic dislocations; there would be the chance of conquering the markets and supply sources denied by the embargo. For the other powers, an embargo would thus be an improvement over an ordinary declaration of military war only if the embargo promised to interdict to Japan the physical means of fighting. Japan, however, controls sources of all important military materials except cotton and petroleum. In a pinch she might get enough of the first from China, while there is always the possibility of Russia supplying her with the second.

Taking this one concrete case, therefore, we see that just as modern war has become an affair of economics as well as gunfire, the new "economic" sanctions are really an affair of gunfire as much as economics. In other words, the economic boycotters arrive right back where they started from. There is really only one question involved—the question of whether peace can be enforced. It is not possible to separate one kind of force from another.

POST HASTE.

Japan considers sending an official explanationer to Washington. Isn't there an old saw in Japanese about the relative loudness of doings and sayings?

Having advance information, we wager the name of the next president of Germany will begin with Hi. Our hunch is that it will contain more than six letters.

Since Capone and his gangsters seem to know so much about the kidnaping, one published suggestion is they be notified that if the baby is not returned within 24 hours Capone will be hanged.

Riddle us this: How can a general sales tax be replaced by one that would tax luxuries out of use?

The tragic end of the Swedish match king is one more proof that wealth and power afford no monopoly of happiness and contentment.

It becomes increasingly evident right along that there is no overproduction of Charles Gates Dawes. He should have been twins.

Vice Chairman Nellie Ross says Democratic victory is in the air. Mere power, or hot air, will sustain flight, but happy landings require skill.

Speaker Garner promises a vote on prohibition today. It promises to quench thirst like the mirage of an oasis in the desert.

It must be discouraging to a person of masterful ways like Mr. Raskob to find that he has had no more success in shaping the prohibition policy of the Republicans than he had with the Democrats.

Some of the reluctance on the Hill to permitting the President to reform executive bureaus is the fear that the Democratic burro might be included.

If the ground thaws this week it will be easier to dig up for baby bonds.

The sales tax is the only one that will remove the budget deficit. Nuisance taxes couldn't budge it.

It is admitted that Gov. Murray has personality, but would Alfalfa Bill personality adorn the White House?

The League of Nations grasps the American policy toward Japanese aggression, not merely as face-saving, but to save its hide.

Gen. Dawes is urged for the keynoter at the Chicago convention. A fitting cuss-word slogan might be very useful in the campaign.

The riot in Chicago was inspired by perfectly logical communistic reasoning—the Japanese consul wouldn't stop the fighting in China.

BEAUTY.

If I were an artist I wouldn't paint
Women past thirty, except for hire,
Beauty by that time is growing faint,
Though prejudiced lovers still admire.

I'd choose for my subject of paint and brush
A glory untarnished and undefiled,
And try to capture the radiant blush
On the sweet, pink cheeks of a little child.

I gazed on them all at the beach one day,
Women of culture and beauty rare,
But a three-year-old tot in the sand at play
Made the only unspoiled picture there.

The Prodigal May Lose an Estate, But He Can't Lose His Ancestry

By ROBERT QUILLEN

SUPPOSE two boys are born on a farm. Both learn to plow, to sow and to reap. Both endure hardship. What one is, the other is.

At the age of 20 one of them quits the farm and goes to a city, where he becomes a merchant. Ten years later he visits the farm and finds in his rustic brother a condescending air of superiority. He demands an explanation. "Well," says the farmer, "you have no background. You are but recently established in a city, while I am heir to all the accumulated traditions of this soil."

Of course you know what the brother from the city would say. He would say: "Why, you poor ass, our backgrounds are identical."

Europe is fond of patronizing Americans because Americans are "young." They have no background of glory and long-established culture. Their oldest family traditions are yet in swaddling clothes. In short, they are raw and crude because they haven't had time to mellow.

What ghastly rot! Did Americans drop down out of the skies, raw and hairy, and begin at the bottom to build a civilization?

Americans came from Europe. All of the traditions of Europe are their rightful heritage. If there is any virtue in a long-established background, the American benefits equally with the European, for he shared the background until he left the old fields to find adventure.

Those who crossed the Atlantic and those who remained at home were in exact degree the beneficiaries of the white man's culture.

The difference between them now is that those who remained at home revere antiquity because they constantly rub elbows with it, while those who adventured value progress because it has provided and yet offers the adventure their restless souls demand.

Americans have the world's finest background of culture.

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

"Senator" Tunney?

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The report that Connecticut Democrats are thinking of running Mr. Tunney, retired pugilistic champion, for the United States Senate suggests their need for a striking personality to oppose Senator Bingham, who has made himself one of the most distinguished members of that body. Senator Barbour, of New Jersey, was once an amateur boxer of note, but thus far no professional pugilist has sat in the Senate. Two generations ago "Honest John" Morrisey, bare-knuckle champion, served two terms in the House of Representatives. A hundred years ago John Gully, champion of England according to some records and runner-up according to others, was elected to parliament.

Mr. Tunney, who has literary tastes and once addressed a class at Yale with Shakespeare for his theme, might prove to be more than a figurehead in the Senate.

Returning Sanity.

Manchester Union.

Reports from different parts of the country indicate that the tide of criticism against President Hoover is steadily receding, and that public confidence in his leadership is steadily increasing. This fact simply proves again that the American people are inherently fair, and that they are beginning to recognize the magnitude of the problem that the President was facing, and the fidelity with which he has applied himself to its solution.

Centennial of Conventions.

Worcester Telegram.

As the first national convention of the Democratic party was held in 1832, when President Andrew Jackson was renominated, the Democratic national committeeman from Porto Rico has suggested that there should be a centennial celebration at the party's coming convention in Chicago. Henry Clay, who headed the Whig ticket in the election of 1832, was also the first of his party receiving a presidential nomination from a convention; the Whig convention, however, met late in 1831. The Whigs were the predecessors of the Republicans of today. So the national convention, in the case of virtually both of our major parties, has its one hundredth anniversary this year.

Why Pass It, Then?

Baltimore Sun.

It is taken for granted that President Hoover, if confronted with the necessity, will veto the Democratic tariff bill passed by the House and due for passage by the Senate, after some important overhauling. As it emerges from Congress the bill will take from the President his present power over changes in tariff rates under the so-called flexible tariff, and most properly. The President is represented as determined to use every device at his command to keep this power, and as quite ready to kill any tariff measure which would take it from him. If that is true, there is not in Congress at present the power to pass such a measure over this veto.

A Democratic Misfit.

Springfield Union.

This year, as four years ago, have appeared persistent suggestions of Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, as a Democratic candidate for President of the United States.

Imagine a business man who talks common sense being selected as a candidate for a party that in Congress attacks business as one of the country's inherent evils!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Virginia Democrat Praises "Guard the Constitution" Editorial — Opposed to Norris Amendment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All good Americans will thoroughly and enthusiastically agree with your timely editorial, "Guard the Constitution." The manner and speed in which the "lame duck" amendment was railroaded through both houses of the Legislature in Virginia is reminiscent of the days when the eighteenth amendment was being "considered" by the Legislatures of the several States.

Regardless of the merits of any proposed change in an amendment to the Constitution, adequate time for serious thought and the most careful consideration and debate are of prime importance. Moreover, time should be given for the expression of public opinion. This was not done in Richmond. The amendment was railroaded through both houses in the spirit of the public-be-damned attitude.

I do not know how the citizens of Virginia feel about the amendment or how they would vote on it if given the opportunity to do so. Neither did the repesentatives in the Legislature. For that reason the citizens of Virginia are chagrined rather than elated over the manner in which their representatives railroaded this amendment through both houses.

Personally, if given an opportunity to express my views, I would have voted against it. I am in favor of having the Congress meet soon after election so that the newly elected members will begin their terms as soon as possible. This feature of the amendment is admirable. But to set the date of the inauguration of our President up to January is a step backward instead of an improvement. The inauguration of our President is a national affair in which all the people have an interest. It is an affair which is looked forward to and attended by people from every State in the Union. Because of the national character of this event it was recognized a few years ago that March 4 was too uncertain as to weather and too early a date on which to have the inauguration. Consequently, following the blizzard of March 4, 1909, a great deal of agitation was started both in and out of Congress to have the inauguration date changed to a date later in the spring. The day provided for in the amendment is almost certain to be a disagreeable, wintry one, which will be suitable for no one to attend, and those few who do venture out will do so at the peril of their lives.

This amendment was a great scheme, and I'm certain no other than the fertile (?) mind of Senator Norris would have conceived it.

Leaders Needed to Grapple With Gangster War on Society—Time to Fight.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on "How the Law Helps Crime" strikes me as exceptionally timely. It should be commended to all who are in positions of leadership for earnest discussion.

During the war, when the Government found itself in a crisis it called into service the best minds fitted to solve the problems and we were amazed at the rapidity of the solutions. Things that seemed impossible were frequently done so quickly that we were scarcely able to believe our senses. We realized the responsibility of the occasion and put forth our utmost efforts.

It is different in times of peace, when so many of our best minds become so absorbed in the pursuit of their individual interests that they turn deaf ears to all matters of public need. They leave public interests for "George" to take care of. Some of them even neglect to go to the polls to vote.

The result of this indifference and neglect is that positions of important trust are often found occupied by persons that are not able even to make a living in private business, but have learned the art of getting votes.

We need to "draft" men into public service who are not candidates but capable. Then the processes of administration would overtake the evildoers.

Your squib, "When a judge takes his life in his hands and sends a big gangster to jail, and then is held up by a Senate subcommittee as a suspicious character, it is time for kidnapers to laugh," is timely also. It is time for good citizens to fight.

Billy Evans Thinks Washington Will Go Toward Tail-End—But Old Pop Bottle Disagrees.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Well, say—now, wouldn't that jar you? Just listen to this anticrack of Mr. Billy Evans of the Cleveland Indians. He says: "Washington is going to be farther down the list than they were last September." Well, folks, that's what I would call good news. The professional experts of baseball are all right so far as their daily task is concerned. Their accounts of single games are all to the good, and I read them the first thing in the morning from day to day. But when it comes to long-time prophecy I have never noticed that they can pick winners any better than I can myself. I guess it's because they get mixed up in so many expert fine points that they often fall down so hard.

Considering last year and the improved line-up this year, we won't worry a good deal because we are headed for the second division by one of the said experts—and an umpire expert at that! I wish I could hear the assembled razz of the Washington fans at the idea. It makes me feel like sending in a request for world series reservations right off the reel.

THE DEFENSE AGAINST SQUEEZE PLAYS.

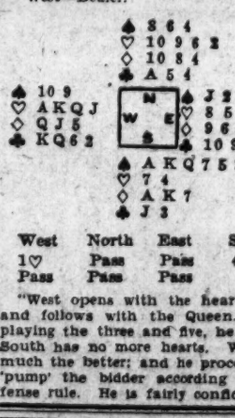
"SOME squeeze situations are born and perceived in the beginning of the hand, some are achieved in the course of play, and others are sometimes thrust upon the player through no ingenuity of his own," writes Mr. A. H. Peron, of Chicago. His discussion of the underlying principles of defense is so interesting that I give it with an example hand.

"To the average player squeeze plays remain somewhat of a mystery; the workings of a strange and relentless fate. When you consider the rather crushing effect of having a squeeze administered, it is, perhaps, not so surprising that so many players, when defending, have developed a sort of Juggernaut attitude toward the squeeze, regarding it as an invincible god beneath whose oncoming wheels one must be crushed without hope.

"Even the advanced player who is in the habit of successfully negotiating squeeze plays is often unable to defend himself against them. And the reason is he doesn't notice the approaching wheels till they are practically upon him—and then it is too late.

"The way to beat squeeze plays is to undermine and destroy the particular situations which are necessary to effect squeezes. The need and opportunity to do so occur far more frequently than most players think.

"West—Dealer.



West	North	East	South
1♡	Pass	Pass	4♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

"West opens with the heart King and follows with the Queen. East playing the three and five, he knows South has no more hearts. Well, so much the better; and he proceeds to 'pump' the bidder according to defense rule. He is fairly confident of saving game. A club trick seems certain and a diamond trick very probable.

"Imagine his surprise and consternation when the last trump led by South finds him in this embarrassing position:

"The spade five forces West to give up a trick in any of the three suits, which is sufficient for Declarer to make his contract of four spades.

"'Too bad,' sighs West. 'It was inescapable.' Of course, the reader has by this time discovered for himself how the contract could have been beaten. After cashing his two heart tricks and receiving no come-on signal from his partner, West comes to a justified pause. If he plays another heart, he will be compelled to hold his Knave of hearts so long as the Ten and an entry remain in Dummy. He realizes he can not afford to do it. He has very few cards he can afford to discard should South take it into his head to run off that bunch of trumps which he undoubtedly has. Furthermore, he sees that with one neat, swift stroke he can absolutely pulverize Dummy. So he plays the club King, draws Dummy's only tooth and a skeleton is the result. The Declarer from now on plays alone. No squeezes are possible.

"South must lose 2 more tricks and fails to make the contract."

TODAY'S POINTER.

Many contracts are made by the Declarer through the use of squeeze plays. Such plays can frequently be guarded against if the defending player recognizes the situation in time.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THAT FAMOUS BLIZZARD OF 1888.

(Even if you never lived in that part of the country, you've heard those wild stories about it.)

"DO I REMEMBER the blizzard of '88?" demanded Elmer Twitchell, getting out the photographs and old newspaper clippings. "I was the last man to get out of it alive!"

• • • •

"What will you take not to recall it?" he was asked.

"Now, don't stop me," he insisted as he plunged into his story while everybody walked out on him. "I was the first man to arrive at the blizzard and the last to leave. It was terrible. With a handful of brave fellows I fought the blizzard of 1888 three days and three nights all the way from Chicago across the country. Time and again, I thought it was out of control and that we could never save the country, but by superhuman efforts I kept it from spreading above the eighth story and by sunset on the 23d of March I had it well under control."

"The blizzard had been over ten days by the 23d of March," he corrected a passerby who had listened in inadvertently.

"Yes, but in those days we had slower means of communication and it took longer to find it out," explained Elmer, a little annoyed.

• • • •

"It began on the eighth of March," he resumed.

"The eleventh," he was corrected.

"Would you make a liar out of me over a mistake of three days over a period of 42 years?" demanded Elmer. "I was standing near the loop in Chicago waiting for a horse car at the time. It began to snow when the car was two blocks north and by the time it had reached me the snow was up above the windows of the car and above the necks of the horses. I never saw such a storm.

• • • •

"I NODDED to the motorman, a fellow named Emil, to stop. He smiled back at me but ten seconds later he was frozen stiff at his post. I tried to drag his body out but just as I reached the door the snow completely buried the car and one of the horses."

"What became of the other horse?"

"He was blown out of the harness. We found the poor animal in New York ten days later. Well, as I was saying, there was I trying to board a horse car only to see it buried before my very eyes. I managed to climb to the roof, but the snow piled up so swiftly that it reached the trolley wires and I walked to New York City literally on those wires before I collapsed."

"How could there be trolley wires in the days of horse cars?"

"In a storm like that anything could happen," exclaimed Elmer.

• • • •

Elmer paused to get his breath. "When I recovered consciousness, I was under a snowdrift 85 feet high, and not a telephone near me!"

"Were there telephones in those days?"

"Even if there had been they would have been useless in that storm. I was in that drift 48 hours before I got a message to the outside world. In the meantime my wife had notified the police. They thought I was being held for ransom and had referred my wife to the Salvy Spitale and Irving Bitz of that era."

"What happened next?"

"They refused to act until the police left the United States. I would have perished if a passerby named Bill Tweed hadn't heard my message."

"How did you communicate to the outside world?"

"By rapping on the walls of the snowdrift. Tweed had no interest in me, but had begun to get sensitive to knockings. It took 24 hours to dig me out, and as I stood on the snow banks and gazed over Manhattan Island at my feet I will never forget the sight. There WASN'T AN ORANGE DRINK STAND VISIBLE ANYWHERE!"

THE SLACKER!

("I believe the individual American has not realized the harm he has done when he hoards a single dollar away from circulation." — President Hoover.)

I feel so guilty—
I know it's wrong
To hoard a dollar
For very long.

My consience is Quite sorely struck—
But still I think
I'll save that buck!

BILOXI COLD PREVENTS NATS' EXHIBITION OPENER

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

Biloxi, Miss., March 13.

THE average mental capacity of the Washington Ball Club was hiked several degrees with the acquisition of the eminent Mr. Moe Berg, late of the Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians, who has joined the Nats from the ranks of the free agents and is destined to do considerable catching in Washington regalia.

Mr. Berg, now known as the most famous linguist in baseball with his command of languages variously put at from 7 to 27, is a graduate of Columbia and Princeton universities and has dabbled considerably in the classics and romantic literature. He laughs off the idea that he gives signs in Hindu, and declares that Yiddish will usually suffice.

Mr. Berg is a reformed infielder, joining the ranks of the catchers by accident rather than design. The great transition occurred in 1927 shortly after he joined the White Sox. He played second base at Princeton and came up to the big leagues as an infielder, at which position he performed in several games before the great change came into his life.

It was one day in New York when the White Sox were playing the Yankees that Mr. Berg unconsciously talked himself into the catcher's mask and protector.

Ray Schalk, who was managing the White Sox and doing the team's catching as well, suffered a broken finger when Herb Pennock, a late swinger, swung late and caught the ball and Schalk's digit simultaneously, rendering the finger null, void and broken.

Schalk called on Crouse, his second string backstop, and a foul tip from Third Baseman Wera's bat collided with Crouse's thumb, a fracture resulting. Schalk sent McCurdy, now with the Phillies, behind the bat, and then turned to Lou Barbour, the White Sox's traveling secretary.

"Get me another catcher, somewhere. Wire for a Class C or Class D man, I don't care who, as long as he can catch. We've got to have another catcher, and hurry up." Then Mr. Moe Berg spoke his piece, which landed him behind the plate in a catcher's regalia.

"Whaddaya mean, Class C or Class D man when you've got a big league catcher sitting on the bench?" Mr. Moe Berg asked Schalk.

An inning later, McCurdy got his bare hand in the way of a foul from Babe Ruth's bath and came down with a fractured finger, the third casualty among Schalk's catchers.

"All right, Berg, get in there," came Schalk's command, and nothing daunted, Mr. Moe Berg, the second baseman, went in there and caught the rest of the game, which Ted Lyons turned into a 2-1 victory for the White Sox.

"The funny part of it is," Mr. Moe Berg explained to your correspondent today, "I wasn't talking about myself when I told Schalk he had a big league catcher sitting on the bench. I didn't want to catch. I was referring to big Earl Sheely, our first baseman. Sheely used to be a catcher out on the coast and I figured he might do. I was only kidding anyway. But I couldn't back down then. I caught a few games as a kid, but played the infield at Princeton.

"In college baseball, it's not what you want to play, it's what you have to play. They saw I was pretty good on ground balls and they made an infielder out of me, but I was always a catcher. It's the easiest position on the field to play and you get lots of action. That's what I like about it. So I'm a catcher."

But Mr. Moe Berg neglects to say also that Ted Lyons and Alphonse Thomas, the pitching aces of the White Sox staff, always preferred to work with him behind the bat. Rarely did Lyons go to the mound but what Mr. Berg was there to do the receiving.

Possessed of a fine throwing arm, Mr. Berg performed acceptably for the White Sox. Never a heavy hitter, he had a penchant, however, for hitting with men on bases and often was used as a pinch-hitter, a role that will probably fit him with the Washington Club.

Mr. Berg's praises are sung by two former members of the White Sox who are now with the Washington team. Carl Reynolds and Johnny Kerr say the Nats will have able protection behind the bat, with Berg ready to replace Roy Spencer if the need arises. Moe says so, too, in eleven languages and fourteen dialects.

Dumbarton Loses Net League Match

Interparks Wins Indoor Honors by Virtue of 5-to-4 Victory.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, March 13.—The Winter Indoor Tennis League brought its session to a close this afternoon at the Fifth Regiment Armory. The feature of the afternoon's play was the fifth and concluding round match between the Interparks and the Dumbarton Club from the Capital City. It was necessary for the Interpark team to win only three matches in order to capture the pennant, but it was able to win 5 to 4.

SINGLES.

Edward Jacobs (Interparks) defeated Dick Mason, 6—2, 6—3; Elmer Rudy (Interparks) won by default from Fred Doyle; John Purinton (Dumbarton Club) won by default from Aaron Miller; Joseph Skrentny (Interparks) defeated Joseph Rutley, 6—3, 6—2; Joseph Hogan (Interparks) defeated Patrick Walker, 9—7; 6—3; W. H. Walker (Dumbarton Club) defeated Walter E. Beuchelt, 8—6, 6—3.

DOUBLES.

Edward Jacobs and Elmer Rudy (Interparks) won by default from Fred Doyle and Commander C. C. Gill; Dick Mason and Joseph Rutley (Dumbarton Club) defeated Joseph Hogan and Joseph Skrentny, 6—3, 6—8, 6—4; John Purinton and Patrick Walker (Dumbarton Club) won by default from Walter E. Beuchelt and Aaron Miller.

Boussus Held Indoor Net Choice

Frenchman Picked to Take Title From Jean Borotra.

13 Seeded Stars Face Fairly Easy Contests Today.

NEW YORK, March 13 (A.P.).—With the big opening day task of reducing the field from 80 contestants to 34 over, players in the National Indoor Tennis championships took their customary day of rest today in preparation for the more important matches to come.

None of the 13 seeded players found any serious trouble in the first and second round matches which were run off yesterday, four of them romping through two matches. Eddie Jacobs, of Baltimore, sixth on the list, did not play, however. His second-round match against Robert Glickstein, of New York, was postponed until tomorrow.

Board Play Handicap To Lott.

George Lott, top seeded player, ran into a bit of difficulty in getting used to the board floor, but said he expected to be able to adapt his game to the conditions after a couple of matches.

The third-round singles matches tomorrow also look fairly easy for the three invading French aces and the ten Americans who were picked as the leaders in the attempt to recover the title from Jean Borotra.

Christian Boussus, who has been picked as favorite over Borotra, faces Stanley Harte, of New York University; the veteran "Bounding Basque" meets Merritt Cutler, of New York, and Antoine Gentien, third of the invaders, clashes with young Sidney Seligson, of New York.

Lott should have little difficulty conquering S. Ellsworth Davenport, of Harvard, and Frank Shields, second seeded American, expects little severe opposition from Lieut. R. M. Watt, of New York. The only seeded players who can expect real matches are Gregory Mangin, of Newark, No. 5, and Eugene McCauliff, former Fordham star, who is ninth. Mangin faces the ace of the present Fordham team, E. Ramey Donovan, while McCauliff clashes with Edward Burns, jr., another fairly good board-floor player.

Bell Due to Tackle Saticks.

Other matches for the seeded stars are Berkeley Bell, No. 3, against Frank Saliahs, of New York; Sidney Wood, No. 4, against Julius Tavalin, of St. John's College, New York; Julius Seligson, No. 7, against William B. Einsman; Bowden, No. 8, against Albert Law, jr., and Eddie Jenkins, No. 10, against E. F. Oppenheimer, Cornell captain.

Schmeling Is Ordered To Sail for U.S. Mar. 31

New York, March 13 (U.P.).—Max Schmeling, world heavyweight boxing champion, will leave Germany for America on March 25 to begin preparations for his June title bout with Jack Sharkey, of Boston, Schmeling's manager, Joe Jacobs, announced today.

Jacobs cabled orders for the champion to sail from Bremerhaven on the liner Europa, which will arrive in New York about March 31.

Schmeling's preparations for the fifteen-round championship bout at Yankee Stadium, New York, June 16, will comprise a brief exhibition tour of fourteen cities, a week at French Lick Springs, Ind., and about five weeks of hard training at a site yet to be selected.

Heights Soccerists Beat British, 3 to 2

A goal, scored directly from a corner kick in the last five minutes of play, enabled Columbia Heights to defeat British United, 3-2, in the first game of the Washington and Southeastern District Soccer Association Cup tie tournament. The Washington Post Trophy will go to the team winning the series. A large crowd witnessed the game which was one of the most enjoyable of the year.

The first half ended with tht teams tied at 1-1. Burdette scored for Columbia Heights, and Gunn for the British. Ed Koennel scored his first goal after 20 minutes of play in the second half, but this was matched by E. Knight a few minutes later. No more scores were forthcoming until Koennel contributed his brilliant shot that won the game. It was the first time a drect corner kick has been made this season.

Dempsey Knocked Out By Influenza Attack

Toledo, Ohio, March 13 (A.P.).—Jack Dempsey was confined to his bed at his hotel here today and has canceled an engagement to appear in a boxing exhibition at Youngstown, Ohio, tomorrow night. Dempsey was taken ill last night following an exhibition bout here. It was reported that he was suffering from an attack of influenza.

Clara Tabler Garners Md. Net Title

Mrs. Martinez Bows, 6-1, 3-6, 7-5, in Final at Baltimore.

Chop Stroke Star at Best in Indoor Tourney.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 13.—A net ball decided the championship of the Women's Maryland State indoor tennis singles at the Fifth Regiment Armory courts today when Clara Tabler's return allowed her to retain her title by defeating Mrs. Ruth Martinez, District of Columbia winner, 6—1, 3—6, 7—5. Miss Tabler won her first Free State title in 1930. Last year, the Armory was not available for a similar tournament.

Miss Tabler upset the seedings and pregame sideline predictions to chop her way to victory over a former conqueror. Mrs. Martinez was seeded second and defeated Miss Tabler in the District of Columbia finals last year. Miss Tabler, although the defending champion, was ranked third, and had downed Mrs. Martinez last summer.

Another upset, according to the seedings, caused by Miss Tabler, came early today when she eliminated Reba Kirson, seeded first, in the semifinals, 6—1, 6—1. In the other semifinal match Mrs. Martinez defeated Clara's sister, Amy, 6—1, 6—1.

Tabler's New Chop Stroke Prevails.

With a newly-developed chop stroke, Miss Tabler wore down Mrs. Martinez' steady rain of shots all over the court. Mrs. Martinez started out mildly in the opening set, but revived in time to worry the ultimate winner with far corner placements that proved baffling and came to a culmination in the tenth game of the deciding set, which went to 18 points before being won by Mrs. Martinez.

Miss Tabler's volleying scored her easy decisions over her gritty opponent. Her greater speed and strength also favored her. Mrs. Martinez, District champion, had never entered an indoor event before and suffered from lack of practice.

Slapped Just for Fun, Primo 'Has to Take It'

London, March 13 (A.P.).—Primo Carnera, huge Italian heavyweight, was leaving Blackfriars ring, where he is training today, when a man stepped out from the crowd and slapped him on the cheek with open hand.

"What's that for?" growled the big Italian.

"Just for fun," his assailant answered, and ran before Carnera could retaliate or a policeman arrest him.

Haines' Arm in Shape For 1932 Pennant Race

Bradenton, Fla., (A.P.).—One worry at least has been lifted from Manager Gabby Street's chest as he starts his St. Louis Cardinals on their drive for another pennant.

Big Jess Haines' ailing arm, which kept him out of the 1931 world's series, is back in shape again.

Instead of going to Hot Springs, Ark., for preliminary workouts, Haines found his wing in such good condition that he went direct to Florida with Street and the advance guard. He expressed confidence that he would be able to take his regular turn on the mound this year.

Trackmen of Mjdwest In Two Great Efforts

Chicago, March 13 (A.P.).—A great mile performance and an almost equally fancy quarter mile, stood out among the accomplishments of Midwestern track stars in the Western Conference and Central Intercollegiate indoor track championships last night.

Henry Brocksmith, of Indiana, who has been going about breaking records in Big Ten duel meets, reached another climax in winning the mile championship in 4:12.5, on the University of Chicago's new indoor clay track, and just to make an evening of it, came back a half hour later to win the 2-mile in 9:18.4. Both marks went for Big Ten indoor records.

In the Central championships at Notre Dame, Alex Wilson raced a quarter in 0:49.3 around four turns, to break his own Notre Lame fieldhouse record. Unfortunately for Uncle Sam, Wilson is a Canadian, and will wear the maple leaf, as he did in 1928, in the Olympic games.

Make A. A. U. Tourney Debut Tonight

Washington Fire Department Basket Ball Team shoots for high honors in its first year of existence when it makes its debut tonight in the District A. A. U. tournament, meeting the Rockville five at Tech High. The Firemen tossers, pictured above, are (left to right, front row) C. A. Birch, R. D. Jones, Coach M. H. Clarke, A. J. Stritch, E. F. Ruth, Ruppert Fail To Talk Contract

Yankee Owner, Star Wait for Other to Make 1st Move.

$10,000 Cut O. K. to Babe if He Gets 2-Year Contract.

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 13 (A.P.).—The wind blew a gale, the Babe played golf and the Colonel took a brisk stroll along the beach today. Otherwise all was quiet on the Florida front, with baseball's highest paid performer still a polite holdout and the two principals sparring for time.

The arrival this morning of Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, marked the only stride toward the settlement of Babe Ruth's salary for 1932, the Babe and the colonel both declined to make the first move in deciding how much is to be lopped off the $80,000 Ruth has received for each of the last two seasons.

"The Colonel knows where he can get me if he wants to talk," said the Babe as he waited for his car to be fixed, preparatory to fulfilling a golf engagement wth Billie Burke, the national open champion.

Ruth Not in Yankee Line-Up.

"Ruth can see me any time now," said Col. Ruppert. "He has my offer and it's up to him."

Ruth as a result was not in the Yankee line-up for the first exhibition game against the Boston Braves and did not even go near the park. His place in right field was occupied by George Selkirk, Jersey City recruit.

"I'm willing to be reasonable and I don't think we will have any real trouble getting together," remarked Ruth with no show of belligerence whatever. "But I had a good year in 1931, one of the best I have ever had, and I don't think I should be asked to take much less than I have been getting."

Ruth is entirely willing to take a $10,000 cut if he can induce Col. Ruppert to extend the $70,000 offer to a two-year basis, but the Yankee owner today insisted he would not consider anything but a one-year contract.

El Hadjar Home First In French Hurdle Race

Auteuil, France, March 13 (A.P.).—A. Aumont's El Hadjar won the Prix Murat Steeplechase at 4,500 meters today, with Baron J. H. de Rothschild's Derby second and Mme. Chipault's Blason third.

The race was worth 100,000 francs (about $4,000).

Giants' Uncertainty Found in Reserves

First Team Is Strong But Injuries May Hurt Chances.

Koenecke Is Lone Recruit Likely to Gain Berth.

By BRIAN BELL.

LOS ANGELES, March 13 (A.P.).—Players who sit on the bench may play an important part in the pennant plans of the New York Giants. There seems to be no question Manager John J. McGraw will be able to put out a starting team able to cope with any in the National League, but his reserve strength remains, at least temporarily, uncertain.

If they could play through the season without incapacitating injuries, the Giants probably could stand toe to toe and slug it out with the St. Louis Cardinals or Chicago Cubs, rated their chief rivals, but injuries are a part of the game and the Giants are quite likely to have their share. Last year, Hughie Critz hurt his arm, Freddie Lindstrom broke a foot and Melvin Ott was knocked out.

Only One Rookie Given Chance.

Only one recruit has a chance to break into the regular line-up. Leonard Koencke, big outfielder from Indianapolis, can hit and knows more baseball than the average rookie. He may get the call over Fred Leach for left field. Lindstrom will play center and Ott right.

Critz is throwing again and unless he suffer a relapse, there will be no question about second base. Bill Terry, Travis Jackson and Johnny Vergez are established at first, shortstop and third base.

The pitching staff runs largely to lefthanders, with four booked to wear New York uniforms, but McGraw thinks a good pitcher is a good pitcher, no matter from which side he throws. Clarence Mitchell, 41 years old, but still going strong; Carl Hubbell and Bill Walker, comparatively young but veterans on the mound, and young Jim Mooney, sensation of last year's pennant race, are the southpaws.

Luque Seen as No. 1 Relief Hurler.

Adolfo Luque, who crossed the bridge from Brooklyn during the winter, will be No. 1 relief man. The wise Cuban may share the first aid duties with Herman Bell, former Cardinal, drafted from Rochester; Joe Genewich, out a year, but apparently ready for a strong comeback, and Sam Gibson, the strikeout king of the Pacific Coast League. All three know how to pitch, possessing knowledge gained in actual experience under fire in the major leagues.

The Giants' camp this year is not the easiest way to a pitching berth for a youngster and the juveniles probably will have to wait a while.

Bob O'Farrell, a veteran, the huge Frank Hogan and Young Francis Healy will make up the catching staff, not the best in the league, nor the worst.

From a post of observation high in the stands, an onlooker is convinced the best insurance the New Yorkers could get would be a couple of first-class utility infielders.

Extra Men of Doubtful Value.

The extra men at the moment include Sam Leslie, a big first baseman, who is a "country" hitter, meaning good; Eddie Moore, formerly of the Braves, Dodgers and Pirates and the good fielding but light hitting Eddie Marshall.

If Koenecke is named for left field, the outfield reserves will be Leach, Ethan Allen and Charles Fullis, all in and out of the game in the Giants' cause last season.

The Giants believe they will win the pennant, good spring doctrine any year. If their playing equipment included an Andy High or Jimmy Dykes, they would find many outsiders in agreement.

BLAZING THE BASEBALL TRAIL

Tampa, Fla., March 13 (U.P.).—The Brooklyn Dodgers defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 3, in their exhibition game here. Brooklyn won the game by making good use of ten hits off the pitching of Larry Benton, Si Johnson and Owen Carroll. Misplays helped each team get one run. Lefty O'Doul featured Brooklyn's attack with two singles and a double in four times at bat. Clyde Manion doubled and tripled for Cincinnati in three attempts. Hack Wilson's only hit, a fluke double, drove in the deciding run. Joe Morrissey, shortstop, reported to the Reds before the game and signed his contract.

St. Petersburgh, Fla. March 13 (U.P.).—Opening their exhibition series, the New York Yankees swamped the Boston Braves, 11 to 4, outhitting their National League rivals better than 4 to 1.

The Yanks batted out fifteen safe hits, while the Tribemen connected with but three. All three of the Yank pitchers were effective, Pipgras yielding three runs, largely because of his wildness. Although Frankhouse, hurling for Boston during the first five innings, held the Yanks runless, the American Leaguers wrecked Brown and Mangum, who succeeded Frankhouse.

San Francisco, March 13 (A.P.).—The San Francisco Missions of the Pacific Coast League found the offerings of two Detroit pitchers to their liking here today and amassed fourteen hits to defeat the American Leaguers, 9 to 3, in the final of a double Sunday exhibition bill. The Tigers defeated the San Francisco Seals, 4 to 1, this morning.

The Missions scored five runs in the first two innings and never were in danger. The Tigers were unable to cross home plate until the eighth, when a three-base hit by Fritz and a sacrifice fly by Rogell were converted into a tally. A ninth-inning rally was cut short after two runs were scored.

Savannah, Ga., March 13 (U.P.).—Now well attuned to New England climatic conditions found here during the past week, Shauno Collins' Red Sox refused to be stymied by the cold and worked out today for two hours. All seemed in excellent condition but sadly lacking in batting practice, which has been hampered. Scrub games will be the daily feature from now on if weather permits.

San Antonio, Tex., March 13 (U.P.). The Texas weatherman relented today and permitted the Chicago White Sox to play their second intraclub game of the spring. The regulars beat the Goofs, 5 to 2, in seven innings. Bob Poser, until recently baseball and basketball star at the University of Wisconsin, made his first appearance in a Sox uniform. His style elicited enthusiastic comment from Manager Fonseca.

New Orleans, March 13 (U.P.).—The Cleveland Indians and New Orleans Pelicans braved near-freezing weather today to play the second game of their delayed exhibition series. The game was called at the close of the ninth with the score tied at five-all.

The Indians showed their lack of batting practice during the past week

Texan's Mashie Shot Soars for 90 Miles

Beaumont, Tex., March 13 (A.P.). The world's longest mashie shot is claimed for Ky Wheelas, Beaumont golfer.

Wheelas was endeavoring to approach a green on the municipal links, when he lifted a high one that sailed over a landing field near by. A mail plane was taking off at the time. Later, when the ship reached Houston, the ball was found in the cockpit, having flown 90 miles from Wheelas' club.

Godwin Completes Work For Lawson Go Tomorrow

BOB GODWIN speeded through three rounds of boxing with Billy Schwartz in Mann's gym yesterday afternoon and announced at the finish that he would risk no further training for his bout with Eric Lawson for the Southern light-heavyweight championship tomorrow night at Portner Arena. The youthful titleholder stated he was afraid of going stale and that further workouts might weaken him.

Scaling 164 pounds—just 4 above the middleweight limit—Godwin stated that he will take a rest after this battle, in which he meets one of the most promising light-heavies below the Mason-Dixon line. He said that he is going to take things easy at his home in Adele, Ga., for several weeks, following which he will invade New York to secure matches with outstanding 175-pounders under auspices of Madison Square Garden and other leading fight clubs of the metropolitan area.

With the Dixie light-heavy title in his possession by virtue of a decision victory over Joe Knight, Godwin has set the world's championship, now held by Maxie Rosenbloom, as his goal. He held Rosenbloom even in ten rounds in Florida last month and was greatly encouraged because most of the experts conceded him the unofficial edge.

But Godwin's plans embrace serious consideration of Lawson, whom Bob respects highly. Though he defeated the handsome Newport News lad last year, he realizes that Eric has improved, and he will toss all his energies into tomorrow night's clash.

Pa Godwin, father-manager of the champion, expressed confidence that Bob will emerge from the battle with the decision. "I, too, know this Lawson is an improved boxer, but Bob is going to outpunch him," said the senior Godwin.

"In the first three or four rounds," Pa continued, "I expect that Bob will have to rely on his boxing skill to keep in front, but by the time the fifth rolls around Lawson will begin to receive a body attack that's go-

Caseys-J.C.C. In Tourney Feature

Irish-Jews to Meet Tomorrow in Headliner of Week.

'C' Club and Palace Fives Play Tonight on Tech Court.

FEATURED by the Knights of Columbus-Jewish Community Center game in the unlimited class tomorrow night, the A. A. U. basket ball tournament, sponsored by The Post, swings into full stride this week with 21 games scheduled at the spacious Tech gym. Teams ranging in size from 100-pounders to unlimited, and in both of the girls' classes, will see action. Arrangements have been made to play six games each night in order to speed up play.

Had the game between the Caseys and Center quintet been scheduled for Thursday night, St. Patrick's night, the setting for one of the greatest "naturals" in recent years would have been perfect. The teams have met twice this season, each winning one game. The victor of this "rubber" game will meet the Saks Clothiers in the quarter-final round.

Hickey's Return Aids Caseys.

Jack Hickey, Catholic University speed merchant, will be back at his old post at center for the Caseys. He was obliged to forego basket ball in favor of track during the winter months. Hickey is well known in local court circles, and played an important role in the triumph of St. Peter's in the 145-pound class a few years ago. Incidentally, St. Peter's was the only Washington team to win in competition with Baltimore clubs in the South Atlantic championships.

The center will also have a new player in its line-up, Dave Sussman a keen-eyed guard who has rejoined the team after an absence from the city. Sussman played havoc with the Delaware & Hudson guards in a recent game, scoring five field goals. Lester Singman, Understein and "Cody" Shapiro, comprise the trio in whom the Knights have most to fear. In "Eggie" Anderson, Jim Proctor, "Heinie" Gubisch and Tom Nolan, however, they will meet worthy opponents.

"C" Club-Palace Vie Tonight.

The second appearance of the "C" Club team in the tournament, with Palace as its opponent, will feature tonight's program. The two are about evenly matched and sizzling action is looked for. Wednesday's feature will bring together two of the cleverest teams seeking the unlimited title, the Maroon Scholastics and United Typewriter Grays. Waverly Wheeler, Everett Russell and Bernie Reichardt, a trio of Tech marksmen who performed brilliantly in the recent high school series, will lead the Scholastics into action. The Grays boast of such players as Lionel Dick, Oscar Sells and "Reds" Olsen.

The Griffith Consumers' game with Fort Washington occupies the featured spot Thursday night. It will be the stiffest competition either team has encountered thus far in the tourney.

SCHEDULE OF GAMES IN A. A. U. TOURNEY

TONIGHT.

7 o'clock—Mount Rainier vs. Brookland Eagles, 100-pound class (upper bracket, preliminary round).

10 o'clock—Sport Mart vs. Dixiana Barbecue, 130-pound class (lower bracket, first round).

Sande May Return To Saddle at 'Graw

Miami, Fla., March 13 (A.P.).—Earl Sande, veteran jockey who has been loosening his riding muscles here for the past several days, said today he would not ride at a winter track this year, but hoped to stage the first race of his comeback in May, probably at Havre de Grace.

Sande came here a short time ago on his honeymoon, and has been galloping five horses each morning at Hialeah Park track since he decided to return to training.

LEARN BULL FIGHTING.

Six Brownsville (Tex.) college boys are taking lessons in bull fighting at Santa Cruz, across the Mexican border.

GATORS GOOD TRIERS.

The University of Florida has sent teams into every form of Southern Conference competition, but has captured only one championship—boxing.

BILOXI, Miss., March 13.—Biloxi's coldest March 13 in its 30 years of history as a township, according to assurances of the estimable chamber of commerce gentlemen, forced the postponement today of what was to be the opening exhibition game of the season for the Nats and the neighborly Baltimore Orioles.

Mr. C. C. Griffith, proprietor of the Washington club, arose from his morning slumber to peer out over the gulf and speculate on the possibility of staging the game. Grave doubts arose within him as he noted the strange incongruity of the scene that showed the usually placid waters whipped into white caps and the tropical palms dipping low before the force of a young gale from the frigid zone.

He braved the cold to venture out on the hotel veranda and came back to say: "'Tis beastly cold and neither fit for man nor beast."

First Game Delayed Till Tuesday.

Manager Walter Johnson surveyed the lobby, where his athletes were comfortably ensconced before the fireplaces, stuck a large, shaggy head outside the premises, withdrew it, and reiterated. "'Tis beastly cold, and neither fit for man nor beast."

Sir Mique Martin, knight of the rubbing tables, whose job it is to keep the kinks from the muscles of the athletes, walked thrice around the far-flung veranda, returning with tinted nose and ears, to remark: "Wowie! It's cold out there! You bozos don't play ball today."

So the first ball game of the exhibition season will not be played until Tuesday, when the scene will be shifted to Gulfport, the base of the Orioles, 10 miles away, where the collapse of two banks resulted in the formation of one big daddy bank, whose collapse a few months ago left the town with no banks and forced the good citizens to do their banking in Biloxi. The depression is no myth in Gulfport and the upward curve of business was socked out of the lot long ago.

So the ball players and their wives, of which there are nine, spent the day in leisurely warmth inside the hotel, with the bridge tables and the pinochle boards taking terrific punishment, as did the high-ball game, a slot machine contraption which has captured all the nickels in this stretch of the Gulf.

Off-Day Won't Hurt, Says Johnson.

Manager Johnson counted the cancellation of the game today as no setback. "The squad is so well advanced that a day of rest won't hurt 'em," he said. "It would be different if we needed all the work we could crowd into the remaining weeks, but we don't. There's just a few late arrivals who could stand some more conditioning, but if I can keep the pitchers on edge, I'll be satisfied."

Johnson's plans for today will carry over until Tuesday. He is standing by his decision to pitch the three rookies in equal stretches of three innings each. The order in which they will work—Frank Ragland, Bob Friedrich and Lynn Griffith—is undetermined, but they are certain to see action.

Carl Reynolds is not slated to see much action in the spring games, in deference to his knee injury of last year and his value to the team generally. He will be in the opening line-up Tuesday, but will be succeeded by young Ralph Boyle, the Baltimore recruit, who is scheduled to be returned to the Orioles, who are in dire need of outfielders.

Heine Manush, Dave Harris and Roy Spencer are not cast for action Tuesday. Manush and Harris, late arrivals, have had lottle opportunity to train, while Spencer's status is so well established that Johnson is eager to observe the rookies of the backstopping department, Cliff Bolton and Howard Maple, in action. It will be another week before Moe Barg will be seen in action behind the plate, but his position as first understudy to Spencer is already assured.

Fischer and Brown Off To Fish.

Carl Fischer and Lloyd Brown are the most intrepid fishermen in camp, braving the weather to take out to Back Bay, armed with a new 85-cent fly purchased in Gulfport, which is guaranteed to entice the speckled trout. Reports of their success are awaited with interest and great doubt.

That he had $50,000 with which to buy a winning pitcher was denied today by Mr. Griffith, who was quoted

MARYLAND TRACKS PLANNING SPECIAL BENEFITS FOR NEEDY

Details Left To Racing Officials

'31 Total of $125,707 Expected to Be Exceeded This Year.

Bowie, Opening Old Line Racing, Considers April 14.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, March 13. — Maryland's four organizations promoting major racing—the Maryland Jockey Club, operator of Pimlico; the Harford Agricultural & Breeders Association, operator of Havre de Grace; the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association, sponsor of the sport at Bowie, and the Maryland State Fair, Inc., operator of Laurel, have agreed to a request launched by Frank G. Roberts, secretary of the citizens' emergency relief committee, to stage special charity programs this year.

Jervis Spencer, jr., chairman of the State racing commission, today revealed plans for the tracks to contribute assistance to the needy unemployed and their families. He said that the program will embrace features which it is believed will produce better results than the special programs netted last year.

Bowie in 1931 staged two special racing programs for the benefit of the unemployed. Each of the other major tracks presented one special program. A total of $125,707.20 accrued from these to the needy, and was administered by the citizens emergency relief committee.

Tracks to Decide Upon Charity "Take."

For the special programs in 1931, the Maryland Racing Commission permitted the tracks to take 8 per cent of money wagered in the mutuels, boosting the customary "take" by 2 per cent. Mr. Spencer suggested that this year the tracks be permitted to adopt whatever conditions they decide should produce maximum profit. He also recommended that the various organizations be permitted to select the day on which the charity cards are to be presented.

Gov. Ritchie is reported by Mr. Spencer to have been thoroughly in accord and to have given the proposal his hearty indorsement.

Bowie, which inaugurates the Maryland and Eastern spring season, opening on April ', will stage the first of the four charity cards. Joseph B. Boyle, general manager of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association, said that he has not definitely decided on what day the program will be offered, but he believed Thursday, April 14, would be the logical day. The spring racing dates provide a two-day lapse between the close of the regular meeting at Bowie and the opening of the meeting at Havre de Grace, which is scheduled for April 14.

Mat Behemoths Clash Thursday

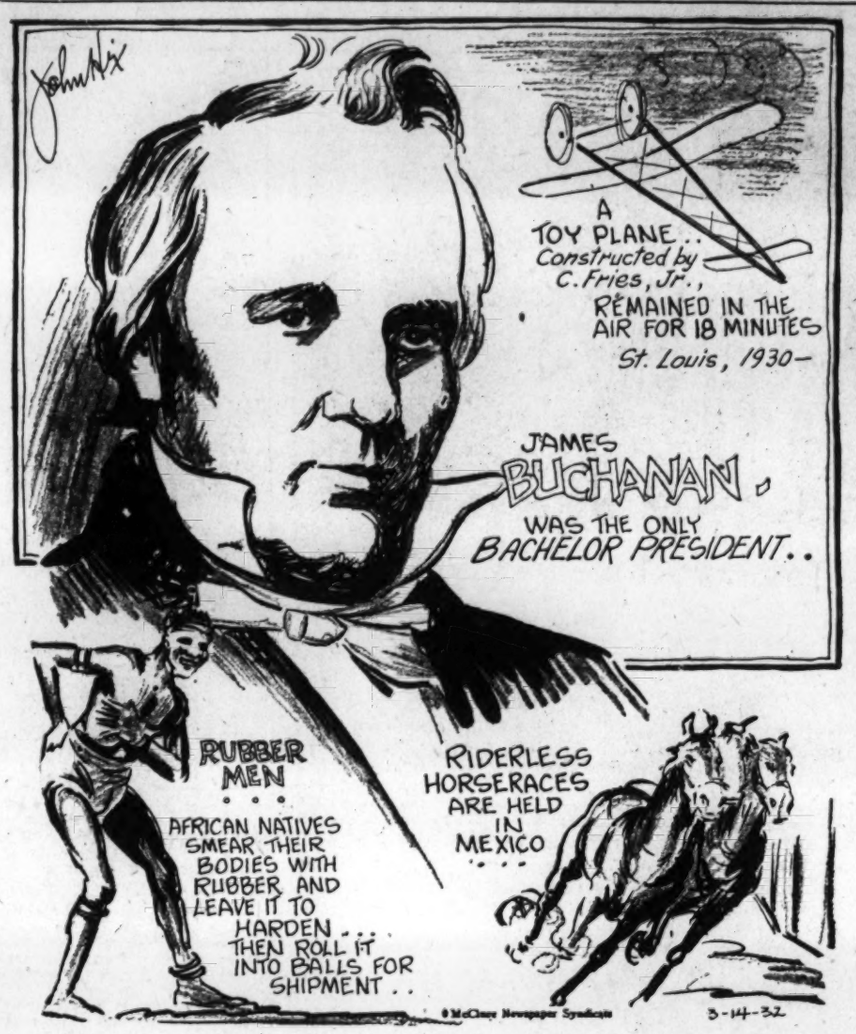
Roebuck Seeks Revenge on Pinetzki in Auditorium Feature.

Two of the biggest men in M. Jacques Curley's thickly populated wrestling stable, Mr. Leo Pinetzki, late of Poland, and Tiny Roebuck, one of the better known mat artists in town, will parade their tugs and holds, grunts and groans, for the benefit of the wrestling-minded Thursday night at the Auditorium. All in all it is to be a big event, according to reports emanating from Joe Turner's H street retreat.

Pinetzki recently held Rosie, an elephant of no mean proportions, to a draw. But Rosie has no holds such as Roebuck has, or she may have plastered Leo's form all over the lot. Roebuck recently suffered the humiliation of being defeated by Pinetzki in New York. He will be striving to even the score Thursday night.

A good supporting card, with Fred Grobmeier and Marshall Blackstock occupying the semifinal spot, has been arranged. And as these stories usually end, ladies will be admitted free, if escorted.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix



WITH the single exception of William Henry Harrison, James Buchanan, fifteenth President of the United States, was the oldest man ever chosen to hold office.

Buchanan never married, and he was the only President who didn't.

In his early years he was separated from his fiancee by a cruel misunderstanding. This separation is believed to have caused her death, and true to her memory Buchanan never wedded.

When he entered the White House, Harriet Lane, the orphaned daughter of one of his sisters, became mistress of the Executive Mansion.

"Aleck" Cochran, of the Ohio University nine, hit a long fly with three men on base. The ball lodged in a tree, and all four men scored. Then the ball fell into the waiting fielder's hands. . . . and four men were out in one inning!

—Tropical Park Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

TROPICAL PARK, Miami, Fla., March 13.—Tropical Park features the Orange State Handicap, at 5 furlongs, tomorrow, and fast sprinters are engaged, with FLYING HEELS, top weight, heading the list of entries. FLYING HEELS is entered with the best sprinters in various handicaps this spring in the East, and the impost of 124 pounds is no more than a feather for him at the distance, with no horse like the speedy Panetian to oppose him.

JAZZ AGE is the most capable to oppose him tomorrow, but FLYING HEELS should lead all the way. JAZZ AGE has a concession of 16 pounds and should be second. VACILLATE probably can hold the others safe, but PANCHO LOPEZ, which beat Double Heart last time out, can not be entirely overlooked. With the line-up, it promises a hard contest for all except FLYING HEELS.

FIRST RACE—CHIEF'S CAMILLE appears best of the assorted maiden platers, her last race landing her second to the fast Noajoyce by a half length. HARUM SCARUM has improved in his last two starts and Friday was third to Ultramarine, indicating he will be a keen contender in this race. LADY ARA, alternating with good and bad races, may get third money.

SECOND RACE—PRINCETON is the class of the second, but will have all he can do with his weak underpinning to stave off the fast ESTIN. Two two should finish in the order named. PREPARE was third last out behind Common and should get the show money. PRINCETON was beaten a nose by Pass In Review last week.

THIRD RACE — HIGHEST POINT, winner of his last two races, should make it three in a row. He beat Noajoyce last out and in fast time. COMMON, becoming more consistent, will be the contender, and ORKIN, double winner recently, is tabbed for the show money. Several of the field have a chance.

FIFTH RACE—SILVER LAKE, third to Traitor last out, a length behind the winner, is selected to win and probably will have PRINCE FOX, third to My Purchase Friday, as the most dangerous of the contenders. CLICK may surprise, and should be third anyway.

SIXTH RACE — PLEASE is well placed. It took Starboard Light's best effort to defeat PLEASE last out, at the same distance. PASS IN REVIEW, much improved, has a mortgage on third money. The field is well balanced.

SEVENTH RACE — WANDERING GOLD is best on his second to Gold Mint a few days ago. This horse is never consistent, but if he gets off in front, may hold his advantage. FRANCOCK has shown speed in recent races and is overdue. He should be the contender. CRYSTAL DOMINO has seen the day when he would run away from these, but on winter form third will do him.

EVANS HERO AS VIC'S BOW

Free Toss Near End Lets Eagles Sweep Series, 22 to 21.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

PUT "Moon" Evans down in your little red notebook as one of the greatest opportunists this city has seen in a long time; put the Skinker Eagles down as a good basket ball team and true champions; put "Tubba" Farrell down as a boy with a fighting spirit who knows not when he is beaten, and mark down in large, black letters the Eagles' third victory of the season over Vic's Sport Shop, 22 to 21. "Moon" won the game for his team, the third time he has pulled that particular stunt, when he made good on a charity toss in the last 30 seconds of play.

The game was far and away the most exciting of the year, and that is taking in a good deal of territory. It produced a thrill a minute, kept the fans in an uproar and the players in a mad frenzy as they literally dove for loose balls, picked off opposing players and followed up shots, some attempted from beyond midcourt.

Vics Lead at Quarter, 9 to 7.

Vic's led at the end of the first quarter, 8 to 7, thanks to Farrell. "Tubba" was doing duty on the foul line in a pivot play. Ralph Bennie was his guard, and it was some battle. Bennie held on to his charge as if he were a rich uncle, and with the referee's vision obstructed, managed to get away with everything but murder. Whenever Farrell attempted to pivot for a shot at the basket, Bennie would squeeze him. The sounds "Tubba" emitted sounded like a sea lion coming up for air. When he did get loose, however, he made up for lost time, scoring 14 points, to lead all of the boys in scoring.

Both teams resorted to close guarding in the first half, which ended with Vic's leading, 14 to 13. Evans did not become a real issue until the third quarter, when he shoved through a pair of shots after Radice had scored, to run the score to 19 to 14. Farrell retaliated with a basket and foul, before Evans scored his next and final goal, and then added two more to knot the count at 21 to 21.

Evans sank his game-winning foul and then Farrell pulled the fans off their seats with a pair of shots that could have gone in as easily as they popped out. The first did a turn around the rim and dropped off, and the second was literally in before the ball remembered that it was the property of the Eagles.

Spring Football Practice Is Listed for Navy Today

Coach Miller Plans Six-Week Session; Baseball, Track, Rowing, Tennis and Lacrosse Teams Plan Outdoor Work.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 13.—Spring football practice for Naval Academy gridders will be formally ushered in tomorrow and continue for about six weeks, Head Coach Edgar E. (Rip) Miller announced today. The day also will mark the official opening of spring athletic teams, baseball, field and track, rowing, tennis and lacrosse, for varsity and plebe groups, although candidates have been at work indoors for two weeks or more.

Miller, head football mentor, has been making periodical visits to Annapolis throughout the winter, and has mapped out an extensive campaign of work for the gridders. Miller, who is a former Notre Dame star, will have the same staff of assistants as last year, chief among whom are Christy Flannagan, half back coach, and Johnny O'Brien, end coach, also Notre Dame men. Flannagan arrived in Annapolis last night ready for work. O'Brien has been here all winter, having been designated to a post in the physical training department, and assistant coach of field and track athletes.

Upcoming Frosh Break In With Veterans.

The spring grid practice is designed chiefly to give the select material from last fall's plebe squad a good "breaking in" with the veterans, who will be available next fall, so that there will be as little delay as possible in getting regular practice under way in September. All of the seasoned players, who have not planned to engage in spring athletics, will don togs and participate in the workouts.

Candidates for the baseball team have profited from limbering-up work in the armory cage during the last two weeks under Head Coach Ernest (Kid) Mohler, and are ready for the outdoor racket. And so is the squad of tennis candidates. But if the cold, sharp weather continues, it is unlikely they will take to the field or courts tomorrow. The Middie tossers will inaugurate a fifteen-game schedule in a little more than two weeks, Vermont being the first opponent, on March 30. Mohler is pleased with prospects for turning out a strong team, as he will have a number of seasoned players to work with, in addition to promising recruits from last year's plebe squad.

Outlook for Rowing Is Bright.

Likewise, the outlook for rowing is highly encouraging. Until the present blustery, cold spell set in last Sunday, weather conditions here were of unprecedented mildness for winter, and as a result the bladesmen have had a number of workouts in shells, in addition to using the machines in the pool of the new boathouse.

With George Finlayson, of Canada, veteran lacrosse coach, back on the job, the Middie stickmen also have done a good deal of preliminary work in the open, and are all set for the formal beginning of practice sessions. Aspirants for the track team have not only indulged in much indoor work, but also on the board track outdoors. Meanwhile the cinder path has been placed in first-class condition.

With well-balanced schedules in all sports, the spring season of competition at the academy promises to be very interesting.

RACING MEET CLOSES AT HAVANA

Lady Broadcast Is Winner of $10,000 Final Feature.

HAVANA, March 13 (A.P.).—Lady Broadcast, 6-year-old daughter of Messenger—Conscious, owned by Herbert M. Woolf, of Kansas City, won the Cuban Grand National, closing day feature at Oriental Park today. The Grand National carried an added value of $10,000 and netted the winning owner $9,950.

Lady Broadcast, carrying top weight, led home Burning Up, from the Denmark Stable, while F. E. Carrideau's Kincsen was third over S. S. Fredlein's Fortunate Youth. George Collins' Thistle Fyrn was the other starter in the field.

80-Day Meeting Comes To Close.

With today's program, the seventeenth annual winter meeting of the Havana American Jockey Club came to a close. The meeting ran for 80 racing days. The crowd which journeyed to the course today exceeded all previous attendance records.

There was but a short delay at the post for the feature event. Lady Broadcast acted unruly for a brief spell, lunging at the barrier. Burning Up was rushed into the lead and showed the way to the first turn. Fortunate Youth was after him, with Lady Broadcast, Thistle Fyrn and Kincsen bringing up the rear. These positions were retained until the field was well settled for the run through the back stretch.

Thistle Fyrn improved his position along with Lady Broadcast, while Hanford, who had the mount on Kincsen, brought him up around the bend. Fortunate Youth floundered when put under pressure coming into the home stretch. Lady Broadcast came on the outside of the leader entering the stretch, drew away and won easily in hand. Burning Up saved the place by a length from Kincsen.

The track was sloppy, due to an overnight downpour of rain.

The City Club was erected in 1921 and that was the beginning of the changing of this block. Bigger and better stores and restaurants took over this section and either remodeled the old buildings or built new ones.

The shoe repair business seems to have been quite popular at that time, with the two shops right together. The sofa on the pavement in the picture looks inviting, especially if one can read the sign on the window above it which reads, "Do your feet hurt?" Open-air cars seemed popular in those days, judging from the two parked at the curb.

VIRGINIA ASSEMBLY ENDS LAW MAKING

Only Few Leaders Remain in Richmond for Check-Up on Work Done.

Richmond, Va., March 13 (A.P.).—Leaving approximately 500 potential new laws behind them, most members of the 1932 General Assembly went home today, with only a few leaders and officers remaining for the fifteen-day "constructive session" authorized for the routine business of enrolling the measures.

Although he has already signed a score or more of the bills passed by the Assembly, Gov. Pollard still has the bulk of the measures before him. He has stamped his veto on one measure, the liberal arts college bill, and promises to scrutinize the remaining bills before him for his signature with diligence.

Outstanding among the bills that went to him were those providing for the relief of local road levies by setting up a secondary State highway system, to be composed of county roads; the county government reform bills, and the measures revising the motor laws.

Considered Leading Measures.

These were considered to be paramount among the hundreds of measures introduced by the 140 representatives chosen in campaigns spurred by a widespread demand for tax relief.

In the confusion of the closing hours of the session, Senator Saxon Holt, of Newport News, president pro tem of the upper house, suggested the appointment of a commission to report in 30 days and "tell us what we actually did while here."

As the Assembly came to an end, joint conferees readjusted the $85,000,000 budget bill, after it had been radically changed in both houses, and it was sent back to the governor almost as he had first recommended it. The major change provides for a shift of $400,000 from the road fund to education. Until the last moment of the session the chief executive sought vainly to make the sum available for education equalization as a safeguard against an emergency in the poorer counties during the session 1932-1933.

Follow Pollard's Program.

On the whole, the Assembly followed the governor's recommendation, "Curtail expenses; no increase in taxes." The Senate veterans, Senators M. A. Garrett and Henry T. Wickham, asserted that the budget was balanced as closely as possible, and they hoped there would be no deficit. Admitting, however, that the margin was close, Senator Wickham said the matter is "in the lap of the gods." Even at that, the general consensus was that Virginia's financial condition, so far as could be predicted on the basis of estimated revenues, was better than most States.

The Byrd plan provides that the State early next summer will take over aproximately 40,000 miles of county roads, relieving the people of $3,400,000 annually. Proponents of the county government reform bills estimate that they will save the localities $3,000,000 annually, if they are adopted. Delegate Hall's tax on rolling stock of certificated buses was expected to yield in excess of $300,000 for local school use.

Cities were helped in the Harmen Byrd plan bill, in the shift of the $400,000 item to the education fund to be distributed on the basis of school population, and by the Hall plan.

New Motor Code.

Passing three of the bus-truck bills the Assembly set up a new motor code, restricting the length, width and menace of trucks, and with the common carrier bill revised the license scale on the heavier vehicles in commercial use based on the damage they were estimated to do to the roads, and provided for a drivers' permit law. In addition to these the Lesner "safety-responsibility" law will safeguard against the lack of accident liability.

The Assembly sought to reduce mounting criminal costs with the passage of the Page bill reducing State paid dry fees, and liberalizing, for the first time since its passage, the State prohibition enforcement act so that automobiles may not be confiscated because of possession of "no more than a quart of liquor for personal use."

It passed, also, the Folkes bill providing "half-time off" instead of one-third for convicts with records of good behavior.

Faced with a necessity caused by population changes, the Assembly was forced to redistrict the State. The bill finally passed consolidated the present Tenth and Seventh Districts into a new Seventh, and left a total of nine congressional districts. The bill became a law without the governor's signature, and with the assertion by the chief executive that the new districts were not of equal population.

Salary Cuts Passed.

The much discussed State salary cuts were passed, although as the fee officers cut bill was passed very few will suffer the 10 per cent reductions applied to the straight salaries. The commissioners of the revenue and the treasurers were placed on a salary basis.

The Assembly took definite steps to stop shortages among the county treasurers, and passed legislation designed against the practice of "holding out tax tickets."

Outstanding in the proposed legislation that failed was the attempt to break the Baylor survey, the teachers' retirement fund plan and most of the proposed election law reform.

As the Assembly went home it left provisions for further investigations of the laws regulating banking and small-loan companies, industrial insurance, the fee system, and a Senate commission was appointed to study practical economies in all State departments.

French Veterans May Visit U. S.

Paris, March 13 (A.P.).—The war veterans of France may soon return the visit of the American Legion in 1927. This became known today when Premier Andre Tardieu promised the officers of the Veterans' General Confederation that he would ask Parliament for funds to finance the trip.

"Neighbors" Feted In Sandy Spring

Group Protests Culvert and Holds Discussion on Depression.

Special to The Washington Post.

Sandy Spring, Md., March 13.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bond entertained the March meeting of the "Neighbors" at Community House, with Miss Estella T. Moore as presiding officer. During a business meeting which followed supper and a social hour the Community Council report was read and approved and a request was ordered sent to the council that a culvert on the road east of Olney was dangerous to traffic.

A nominating committee was appointed to name delegates to a general committee which will elect members to the Community Council. A new form of entertainment inaugurated at the meeting was a "question box" and a discussion of "What beneficial experience have you gained from the current depression that will be of benefit to you in the future?"

Among the guests were the Misses Stabler, of Edgewood; Mr. and Mrs. Austin LaMar, Mrs. Francis M. Hallowell, Miss Amy P. Miller, Miss Elizabeth T. Stabler, Miss Brown, Miss Wood, Miss McAlpin and Mr. Robert H. Miller.

Big Barn Is Razed By $30,000 Blaze

Farm Implements, Much Live Stock Lost in Fire Near Warrenton.

Special to The Washington Post.

Warrenton, Va., March 13.—A large barn on the Alwington Farm, one mile from Warrenton, and belonging to Mrs. Harrison Nesbit, was destroyed by fire Saturday night. Included in the loss was much live stock and some farm implements.

The loss, according to Scott Nesbit, one of the owners, will run over $30,000. Due to the recent storm, putting telephone wires out of order, the report of the fire was delayed getting to the Warrenton Volunteer Fire Department, and most of their efforts had to be concentrated on saving a big barn nearby.

Part of the loss is covered by insurance.

Highway Relief Plan Is Backed by Legion

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—Terming the proposed Federal emergency highway construction bill, appropriating $136,000,000 for road work throughout the Nation, "an economically sound and definite measure" of unemployment relief, the American Legion today announced it would urge its passage by Congress.

"Passage of the emergency highway construction bill at this time," Henry L. Stevens, jr., national commander, said, "will be of almost immediate benefit to the country at large, and in urging its adoption the American Legion feels it is putting its strength behind an economically sound and definite measure of unemployment relief."

A TELEPHONE CALL is a sure cure for those waiting-room blues. Instead of a trip down and back to find your man isn't available, a telephone call does the trick in a few seconds. Telephone service is necessary in these hurried days. And the cost is way down within reach of the scantiest-lined purse.

In Washington, you can have a telephone in your home for as low as $2.50 a month

FAMOUS SEER
THE MAN WHO KNOWS

This strange man sees the way and tells it all. Just what your life has been. Just what it will be. Tells you when and whom you will marry, whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false. Tells as to changes, travels, lost or absent friends, divorce, wills, deeds; whether it is best to buy or sell. He tells the good and the bad. A visit will convince you of his wonderful power.
Something tells you this is the man. You feel the impulse to call. Do not delay.

● Cotton cloth for Hindus by the Ganges and candy for Park Avenue debutantes; electrical machinery for Soviet Russia and lenses for astronomers high up in the Andes—these products represent only four of the 285 industries in this country served by the Associated Gas & Electric System.

Geographical areas served are as varied as the industries they contain. Twenty-six states and 3,100 communities are numbered. Customers in these communities total 1,443,000. Service is extended to 1,189,141 homes, 169,874 stores and buildings, 25,197 farms and factories.

Diversified Service brings More Steady Revenue

If business is dull in some areas, the Associated System has others upon which to rely... if a dozen industries are experiencing poor seasons, the System serves 273 other industries... if all industry averages below normal, there are 1,189,141 Associated domestic customers whose use of electricity, gas and other services continues. Associated homes used 8.3% more electricity in 1931 than during the previous year.

8% Eight Year Guaranteed Bonds

The Associated Gas and Electric Company is offering 8% Eight Year Guaranteed Gold Bonds (participating conditionally to 10%). Consolidated earnings applicable to the guaranty after depreciation are approximately nine times the interest on $40,000,000 of these bonds at 8%.

Generous Income Return—Initial Interest on these bonds is 8½% with 7% paid on partial payments. The bonds, which mature in 1940, are available in units of $10 and multiples. They carry warrants entitling holders to purchase Common Stock at $5 a share during a fifteen-year period on the basis of one share for each $100 of bonds.

Use of Proceeds—The proceeds of these bonds, which at the completion of this financing will have a junior equity upon which there has been paid in over $650,000,000, will be used primarily for paying obligations which are already ahead of all securities of the Company.

Confidence in Associated securities as expressed by investors is indicated by their number, 190,000, at the end of 1931. This represents a gain of approximately 20,000 during the year. Present security holders have the first opportunity to buy the new 8% Eight Year Guaranteed Bonds. Purchases by others are subject to confirmation.
